COUNTY ASKS $260,000 FOR 1932 EXPENSES

Auditor Draws Annual Budget for Board of Commissioners.

INCREASE OF $28,000

Shortage Found in Operating Expenses This Year Cause of Boost.

Revenue of $260,000 to meet operating expenses and apply on the bonded indebtedness of Marion county for 1932 was asked in the annual budget filed by the county commissioners with County Auditor Earl E. Thomas.

Public hearing on the budget will be held in the offices of the commissioners Aug. 28 at 9 a. m. If approved at that time by the commissioners it will be submitted to the budget commission.

Increase of $28,000

The budget drawn up for next year represents an increase of $28,000 over the amount asked for last year when a total of $232,000 was sought.

Two factors contributed to the commissioners seeking more funds for next year, Auditor Thomas said. He revealed that Jan. 1 the county will face a deficit estimated between $20,000 and $35,000. An extra $10,000 was asked for next year to meet bonds issued for emergency poor relief which will come due. These bonds must be paid for from taxes levied within the 15 mill limitation.

The deficit, the auditor said, is a direct result of delinquent taxes. At the present approximately $10,000 in bills remain unpaid because of a lack of funds and it is estimated that the county will receive about $100,000 from the September settlement which will be about $26,000 short of the amount needed to operate the county government until Jan. 1. The deficit combined with the added money needed for the poor relief bond retirement fund made it necessary for the county to ask for a higher levy under the 15 mill limitation, Thomas said.

Estimate Expenses

Of the amount asked to be levied, the general fund will receive $225,000. The county asked $197,000 for the general fund this year.

Actually it will take $284,616 to operate the county next year, it is estimated. This is $14,139 less than was sought for this year when the budget commission was asked to provide $298,755. This is exclusive of the funds needed for bond retirement.

The decrease in the total amount asked for the general fund used for the operation of the county resulted when $20,000 used for the reappraisal of real estate was eliminated from the budget. This year the auditor is asking for a total of $18,100 for the operation of his office compared with $37,600 asked for last year. One item in the auditor's budget was increased $500. This was made to meet the added expense for new supplies needed to comply with the new tax law passed by the last legislature.

Sources of Income

Other sources of revenue outside direct taxation from which the county expects to obtain money for operation are from the cigaret license tax, fees of county offices and money due the county from

TO CHANGE ROUTE MARKERS ON NOV. 1

Federal Highway 30 Signs To Be Moved to Lincoln Road.

Nov. 1 has been set as the tentative date for changing markers on the Harding highway when the present road will become known as U. S. route 30 south. The date was set by O. W. Merrell, state highway director.

When the markers are changed the Lincoln highway going through Mansfield, Bucyrus, Upper Sandusky and Delphos will become U. S. 30. The present route 30 goes through Galion, Marion, Kenton and Lima.

For the last several years organizations in the cities along the two routes have been fighting for the U. S. routing. Several months ago the state highway director recommended that the change be made with the Lincoln to be known as the regular U. S. 30 with the Harding as an alternative southern route.

Local organizations sought an even break on the traffic after the recommendations were made asking that the Lincoln be known as the northern route and the Harding as the southern route.

CONSIDER MERGER OF 2 LOCAL GROUPS

Committee Named To Study Feasibility of Uniting Organizations.

A committee to consider the feasibility of consolidating the Marion club and the Marion chamber of commerce was named at a meeting of Marion club members last night.

J. Malcolm Strelitz was appointed chairman and will make a report to the club in two weeks.

If the consolidation is brought about it will bring a social side to the chamber of commerce while the Marion club will benefit from the business side. At the present time the chamber is a business organization while the club is social.

The predecessor of the Marion club was the Commercial club which took part in both business and social life. There is a possibility that if the combination is completed the two clubs will take on the Commercial club name. The present Marion club rooms would be used as headquarters.

A membership committee headed by George Frank also was named last night for the club.

Illinois Man To Hear "Funeral" Rites Preached

By The Associated Press

VALIER, Ill., Aug. 15—S. R. Patton isn't going to wait until he dies for his funeral sermon, because he wants to know just what the preachers are going to say about him.

Hence Patton, who is 80 years old and a pioneer farmer, has arranged for five ministers to come out to his place on Sunday, Aug. 16, and officiate at his "funeral."

"You see, I cannot live many more years and I have long wished to undergo the sensation of having my funeral preached while I was sitting by, instead of lying in a casket," he said, in explanation of the unusual affair.

"I am a great believer in tossing bouquets at the living rather than at the dead and if any one has flowers for me I had rather they would throw them in my lap than on my grave. If the ministers wish to speak of my mistakes and imperfections they will have full liberty to do so."

Rev. John B. Maulding of McLeansboro, one of the five preachers invited was asked how he would speak. He said he would "try to talk as though this old man had passed on."

POST AND GATTY PLANE IN MISHAP

By The Associated Press

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Aug. 15—Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, round the world fliers, found the tide too high for them today when they attempted to take off for Montreal. Their plane swung into the edge of the ocean, but was not seriously damaged.

Bystanders gave them a hand and pulled the globe girdling plane back up on the sand. Another attempt to take off was to be made later.

The tip of one blade of the propeller was bent as it struck the waves and water was sprayed over the machine. The fliers set to work to straighten the bent propeller and said they would take off this afternoon when the receding tide gave them a wider runway.

JAPAN LEVIES FINES ON AMERICAN FLIERS

$1,025 Penalty Climaxes Series of Mishaps for Herndon and Pangborn.

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, Aug. 15—Climaxing a series of mishaps which have beset them since they started a projected globe-girdling flight from New York, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, American aviators were fined by the district court here today for violation of the strict aviation laws of Japan.

Each fine was 2,050 yen ($1,025). One thousand dollars of each fine was for violating civil aviation laws and $25 for flying over Japanese fortified areas—usually when they came here from Khabarovsk, Siberia, to attempt a transpacific flight after they ended their world hop attempt in the Siberian village far behind the time of Harold Gatty and Wiley Post, whom they hoped to succeed as the fastest navigators around the world.

Customs Caused Trouble

Although Herndon and Pangborn flew to Japan without a permit government officials were inclined to disregard this until they dis-

LINDBERGHS END 1,067-MILE SEA FLIGHT TO ASIA

"Flying Vacationists" Bring Craft Down on East Coast of Siberia After Hazardous Jump of Nearly 11 Hours Over Arctic Territory.

Famous Couple Skirt Storm Area All Along Route from Alaska, Maintaining Average Speed of About 100 Miles an Hour.

By The Associated Press

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 15—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were at Karagin island today, having flown to Asia from Alaska across the sea.

Their landing on the island on the east coast of Siberia after a 1,067-mile flight across the Bering sea from Safety Bay, near Nome, Alaska, was announced by the naval radio station on St. Paul island.

Several radio stations on the Pacific coast received the message, saying the flying vacationers reached the little volcanic island at 1:49 a. m., Eastern Standard time, 5:49 p. m. on Karagin island.

The Lindberghs left Safety bay at 9 a. m. (Friday—3 p. m. Eastern Standard time) and crossed the northern sea in 10 hours and 49 minutes. The story of the flight was told piecemeal in radio reports sent during its progress.

Await Favorable Weather

With a 500-gallon supply of fuel the Lindbergh plane left American waters shortly after the fliers had received word of clearing weather to the westward. Fifteen minutes after the take-off all Nome watched as the plane disappeared toward Asia.

The St. Paul island radio station made its first contact with the plane 20 minutes after the take-off and worked with it at intervals until Mrs. Lindbergh advised she was resting in her antenna preparatory to landing.

Colonel Lindbergh kept the speed of his ship close to 100 miles an hour—the fuel saving gait—throughout. After about two hours of flying Mrs. Lindbergh reported low fog, a wind of five miles an hour and a smooth sea. She was attempting to make contact with Russian wireless stations in Siberia.

Skirt Storm Area

Keeping to the north of the storm area, the plane continued its steady progress. Mrs. Lindbergh reported sighting Cape Navarin, 250 miles west of St. Lawrence island, at 7:40 p. m., Eastern Standard time, saying the plane was flying high and the visibility good.

At 9:30 p. m., eastern Standard time, alert ears heard Mrs. Lindbergh report her position as 75 miles south of Cape Navarin, 2,200 feet in the air and flying over broken fog along the Siberian coast. She was trying to communicate with the steamer Buriat.

Japan reported its first connection with the plane at 10:40 p. m., Eastern Standard time, when Ochiishi radio station announced it had received a message from Mrs. Lindbergh saying they were passing Cape Olutorsk, about three-fourths of the distance between Nome and Karaginsk.

At 1:37 a. m., Eastern Standard

ARREST TWO IN TORCH DEATHS

Police Hold Fourth Man and Woman in Michigan Murder Case.

GRILL SLAYERS 10 HOURS

Seek Possibe Connection in Long Series of Crimes Near Ypsilanti.

By The Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Aug. 15—A fourth man and a woman were in custody today as officers sought to reveal the full criminal activities of three torch slayers who killed two young couples and burned their bodies to conceal a petty robbery.

The woman, Catherine Keller, 25, niece of a late municipal judge of Ypsilanti, Mich., is said by at least one of the killers to have been with them when they shot and bludgeoned their young victims to death and turned their automobile into a funeral pyre last Tuesday morning.

Denies Any Part

She denies it and insists she parted from Fred Smith, her sweetheart and one of the killers, and Frank Oliver and David Blackstone, the others, several hours before the robbery and the brutal murders that followed.

In her possession, however, was found a pistol, which officers said they believed was used in the slayings, bloody clothing belonging to Smith and some blood spattered newspapers.

It is the gun that involves Howard Forwalter, 24, also of Ypsilanti, who is held for investigation. He has identified it as being in Smith's possession as late as Tuesday morning, officers said, and added they had evidence indicating he had supplied the weapon.

Prosecutor Albert J. Rapp, of Washtenaw county, and other officers questioned the slayers at length yesterday, in Michigan state prison at Jackson, where they are starting sentences of four life terms each. The questioning was designed to determine the connection, if any, of the woman and Forwalter, with the murders and to ascertain whether they comprise the gang which has preyed upon "petting parties" for months, assaulting one young woman.

To Continue Grilling

After 10 hours of interrogation, Prosecutor Rapp said he had made "a little progress" and expected to resume the questioning today.

That portion of the killers' confession which indicated bootleg liquor accounted for the savagery with which they murdered Thomas Wheatley, Harry Lore, Vivian Gold and Anna May Harrison precipitated raids on blind pigs all over the county yesterday.

Otis Oden, 40, from whom the slayers said they obtained their liquor, was arrested late last night as he was leaving for Warren, O.

New 'Medicine' Should Restore Jimmy's Health

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Aug. 15—New York's visiting mayor, James J. Walker, left in a special train for Carlsbad today to resume his search for health, bearing with him a "medicine" he could hardly get in his own country.

Official Berlin was represented at the station by Dr. Von Drigalsky, city health commissioner, who assumed the role of personal physician to the mayor before the train pulled out.

"Mr. Mayor," he said, "I have some medicine here for you," handing him a bottle of choice Rhine wine.

"And do I take this a spoonful every hour?" queried the mayor.

"No, no," was the reply. "That's special medicine that must be taken a cupful at a time."

"You're a fine physician," Walker said. "I'll have to get Schroeder (his personal physician) trained like you."

The German government accorded New York's mayor the courtesy of permitting him to say goodbye to his friends in a special waiting room reserved for royalty and heads of foreign governments

Remember England, Ark., that had all the trouble during the drouth last fall? Well, there is a coal mining section of Oklahoma (same as the coal mines everywhere) where they were mighty hard up. So this England, Ark., just loaded up 13 hooping truck loads of food and sent them to Henryetta, Okla. Now that's remembering. Isn't it? England is in a mighty fertile country and this year it really has raised something. 'course they can't get anything for it, but isn't it nice they help others out with it? Yours,

Will Says Russia's Five-Year Plan May Bring Changes in Division of Wealth

By Will Rogers

ALL I know is just what I read in the papers, and I havent had much time to peruse the prints here lately. Being a Col. on Alfalfa Bill's staff means action These Wars of his were coming so fast there for awhile that they were over-lapping. We finished licking Texas over the Free Bridge late one afternoon and before dark that same night why Bill had one matched with the Big Oil People And he told me that that was nothing to what he had in view for the future.

You know not only in Oklahoma or anybody else's State we haven't had a fighting Governor for years Most of em have just been plain old every day Politicians that didn't look for any more excitement than the next election. But with Bill its different He knows Oil aint what it ought to be, and so he just loaded up his old Musket and started out to put it on a paying basis

The Standard Oil and all those big fellows aint monkeying now with Injunctions, and Habus Corpuses, and all that old Hooey, they are up against bullets now. Us Hoklamonians dont mess with all the ordinary proceedure, we just go shoot it out till we get our price

Not Enough "Murrays"

If Bill gets away with this, why it will be the road to a lot of industries loading up and trying to get $1.00 a Bottle for Pepsident, or 75 cents per gill for Sloane anticeptic mouth wash I would like to see the old Butter and Egg men go out for a higher revenue on the output of the Heifer and Pullet Trouble is there aint any of these that have got another Bill Murray. You got to have Leaders, and Bill aint enough to go round. Just Our own Industries alone is going to keep us Boys in the Trenches till Xmas

Bernard Shaw and Nancy Astor, two of my old London friends, been to Russia and got back a couple of weeks ago Shaw was so impressed that he couldent tell the Reporters a thing (Free), he was waiting till he could get home and write it himself. (I have done that same thing many a time) Bernard and I and Calvin got to live on our "Cracks" wise and otherwise, and we cant go handing out a lot of information on where we have been and what we have seen.

Shaw seems to have got over mighty big up there. He has always kinder pulled for em, and it was a great thing for their Country when they landed him to come up. And taking Lady Astor and her Husband, who have a lot of money, and favorably impressing them, why that was a big job, Cause if Nancy dont think its working why she will sure blat it out. There is none of the fourflusher in her; she is the plainest spoken Woman you ever saw.

Plan Scares Will

Bernard told em if he was a young man he would stick with em. That was a mighty pretty compliment; it dident bind him to anything. He was already old so he dident have to stick by it, so he can go back to London to all his luxury and dont have to worry about the five year plan only from a distance. I been reading a lot of books on that thing and it sounds so big it almost scares you, a whole Nation of 150 million people all working, no profit, no board of Directors, No Dividends, No Wall Street to support.

Just think for a minute what would be the profits on products in this Country, if there was no Grain or Produce Exchanges or Wall Street to provide for. Look what a Farmer would get if he got all that the consumer payed Then all the Big Industries being run with no profit, turning everything out at cost. Their own Steel mills, their own Ore mines, Own water power, and an unlimited supply of coal, Wood, the greatest Forests in the World, all productive. No Deserts You see they are playing with the biggest natural resource fountain in the World.

If Italy started the same thing it wouldent mean so much, for they could work as hard but they would have to buy raw materials from other Countries. But these folks have everything that any other Nation has only more of it Now they are buying brains people to show em how to get all this organized. We have thousands of trained men over there, working to show them how to work with different machines. Now when they learn that they wont leave us any corner on it, for No nation has a monopoly on brains. The thing sure is worth watching for just the idea of everybody working and producing something is going to have collosal effects.

Bound To Bring Changes

Look at what we produce, and there is only about one-third of us producing anything. The two-thirds are living off the one-third, and then we got more than we can sell So just imagine what price they will be able to sell stuff for. No, you cant laugh em off, they sure got some weird ideas, and things that a people like ours would never in the world tolerate. But they have got some changing in carried out properly is bound to make the world some changing in this unequal division of wealth.

For thats whats the matter with us. No Country ever had more, and no country ever had less. Ten men in our Country could buy the World, and ten million cant buy enough to eat So the salvation of all that might come out of these Cuckoo Russians If it does, it will have paid for itself whether the whole five year plan works or not. So we aint going to get nowhere cussing em. We better watch em, and if they got anything any good why cop onto it, and maby we can feed everybody.

The Stars Say—

Sunday, Aug. 16

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds excellent auguries for those in employment, for all ecclesiastical and mystical affiliations, with the prospect of gain, advancement and fulfilled ambitions, to at least a moderate extent. It is possible that there may be some minor personal anxiety or disappointment.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fairly successful and prosperous year, with some recognition, favor or advancement in employment, and with improvement financially, possibly by deals with large corporations or by secret agreements. A child born on this day should be clever, ambitious, faithful employers, who should reciprocate by favors and advancement. It should do well in life

Monday, Aug. 17

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is an adverse one, with many signs of hospitality and troublesome experiences. It may prove a day of disturbance, turbulence and danger, unless the greatest care be exercised to avoid rash, violent, passionate and precipitate conduct. Make changes carefully and safeguard the employment. Personal associations may prove compensatory.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of delay, turbulence and frustrated hopes, unless a cool, calm, wise and controlled method of meeting menace, hostility, and adversity be exercised. Be careful in employment, shun all strife, and make changes cautiously. A child born on this day may be disposed to be quick, rash, headstrong and quarrelsome It should be given early training and discipline in self-control and good nature.

"HUMP-BACKED COW" TURNS OUT TO BE REAL DAUGHTER OF DESERT

BY HALLIE HOUCK

WOE unto Allah. One of his children of the desert has been grossly defamed. Aqa, king of desert beasts, a coffee-with-cream-colored camel has been called a sway-back cow.

Aqa, (pronounced Akka, and perhaps it's spelled with two q's) is the distinguished guest and lord of the G B. Grace farm south of Marion on the Prospect pike.

Real Insult

But her good name has been dragged in the mire and if Aqa knew, that a man of this strange northern country had called her a sway-back cow Aqa and Allah would get together and arrange a fitting revenge.

Among the many who stop at the farm for a closer inspection of the animal, was a man who had seen Aqa from a distance. He asked Mr. Grace where he got the sway-back cow with the humps—and the man was as serious as the present depression. Therein lies Aqa's grievance or would lie if someone told the proud beauty.

Seeing Aqa is like "seein' things." Persons passing the farm stop, rub their eyes and take another look It's incongruous to see a camel at pasture in a field with sheep and cows.

Aqa was at one time with the Freiburg Passion Play Co After an engagement in Marion in December, the company moved to Wisconsin and the Dakotas and it was too cold for Aqa and for Jack and Jennie, the donkeys, and they were left at the Grace farm until the company comes south to play in warmer climes Charles Grace, son of Mr. and Mrs G B Grace, has joined the company as assistant manager

Have Sweet Tooth

All three of the animals pardon the error—four now, since Judy was born to Jack 12 weeks ago, are "simply nuts" about sugar. They'd follow a hand with a lump of sugar to the end of the world

Miss Dorothy Grace who graduated from Harding High school in 1930, rides Aqa all over the farm and does Aqa love it? She does Miss Grace hasn't yet mastered the art of making Aqa kneel and mounting in true native manner Aqa rolls over then, but Dorothy stands Aqa up beside a fence, straddles the humps and away she goes

Jack and Jennie and Jack's baby Judy are cute little beasts in their own right and probably would attract a lot of attention if it weren't for the stately Aqa. It was either Jack or Jennie that nearly stole the opening scene of the Passion Play here. Wise little beast came out, took the center of the stage, rolled bright, inquisitive looking eyes at the audience and had a great time.

She Conceals Age

Aqa may be 15 years old or she may be 25 Her teeth are softening, but Mr. Fassnacht assured Mr. Grace that it was because Aqa ate so much sugar that her teeth were beginning to give 'way.

This spring the pride of the desert had a brand new coat of hair. Camels should be sheared, Mr. Grace said last night, but he found that out too late and the curry-comb applied with elbow grease removed the shedding hair and Aqa emerged with a-skin-you-love-to-touch. Now the new coat has grown in and Aqa is her usual rough self.

One man who was amazed at the sight of a camel silhouetted on the horizon, asked if he might take a picture of Aqa. He explained that he was going to tell his wife he had seen a camel just south of Marion but 'd have to have a picture to pr e it or she'd believe — well almost anything but that story.

Aqa and the three donkeys may be guests at the Grace farm for months to come. They've been there since Jan. 1 and their original two-months' visit has extended to eight months and nothing has been said about their rejoining the company.

The four show animals are all gentle and sweet-tempered, friendly with anyone who stops to visit, and seemingly anxious to put their show over Aqa and the donkeys eat anything that's given them Camels, it seems, don't require a special diet

MISS DOROTHY GRACE ON HER MOUNT, AQA

Some have polo ponies, some have pintos and many have riding horses, but Miss Dorothy Grace has a camel. She and Aqa enjoy frequent rides over the G. B. Grace farm. Aqa's consuming passion when mounted, is to chase pigs over the broad acreage and the bumpety-bump ride is not soon forgotten, Miss Grace told an interviewer.

A dahlia plant which has achieved the height of 10 feet is being offered by Mrs. Thomas R. Glaze of 698 north Main street, as the champion tall growing plant of the city

Learn what a difference six cylinders make in smoothness

quietness
flexibility handling ease
riding comfort
dependability economy
long life

Step out of any other low-priced car, step into a Chevrolet, and you'll learn what a difference six cylinders make.

"Idle" the engine—and the whole car remains steady. Open the throttle—the power flows evenly. Accelerate—throttle down—go fifteen or fifty—and this smoothness stays with you whatever you do. For six-cylinder smoothness is built into the motor—and objectionable vibration never even starts!

Yet smoothness is only part of your six-cylinder experience. There's greater quietness, because noisy vibration is gone. There's greater comfort, because built-in smoothness doesn't tire the driver or passengers. There's greater flexibility, because the power-impulses of a six overlap. And response is more positive, performance more elastic. A six is much easier to handle!

And particularly, if you raise the hood of a Chevrolet and watch the engine running smoothly and steadily, you'll realize that six cylinders also mean greater dependability.

You owe it to yourself—to see and drive a Chevrolet today. And remember when you do—that no other car is so economical to operate as the powerful Chevrolet Six!

Former Marion Man Hooks 42½ Pound 'Muskie'

A 42½ pound fish that swam the waters of Crow Bay, Canada, for six days with a June bug spinner hook in its mouth was caught by a former Marion man, W. J Locke, now district manager of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States with headquarters in Mansfield while spending a vacation with R. Cole of Cole's Point, Crow Bay, recently The fish was a "muskie" and is regarded as one of the largest ever caught in that region It measured five feet three inches in length and 21 inches in girth.

The fish had almost been landed by a Pittsburgh, Pa., man, but escaped after an hours battle, taking with it the bait, a June bug spinner. Six days later, Locke got a strike while fishing from an outboard motor boat on the Trent river, near the bay. It required 45 minutes to sufficiently subdue the fish so it could be landed. It was then discovered that the missing spinner was imbedded in its mouth, identifying it as the same one hooked six days previously

The struggle was witnessed by many visitors and cottagers along the bay. The fish is to be mounted

Ohio's New Tax Laws

This is the fifth of a series of articles by International News Service, explaining the new taxation laws adopted by the Ohio 89th general assembly.

TAXPAYING periods were increased from two to four a year by the state legislature when it passed the new intangible tax bill. Municipalities, townships, counties and school districts will receive as many tax settlements from the county auditor and county treasurer as a result.

Broken up taxpayers the new arrangement will provide a greater consolidation, and for treasuries of the political subdivisions it will furnish money more often, although not necessarily in greater amounts, than before, in the opinion of Anthony J. Kraus, of Upper Sandusky, state tax commissioner who will administer the intangible law.

Real estate and public utility taxes will be paid on or before Dec. 21 and on or before June 21, with tax settlements scheduled on Feb. 15 and Aug 10, under provisions of the new law.

Taxes on general personal and classified property will be received on Feb. 15 and from May 10 to Sept. 10, according to Kraus.

Kraus declared he believed taxpayers all over the state would welcome the opportunity to distribute their payments into four periods.

Helping Hands of Jesus

A SERMONETTE

BY REV. KARL W. PATOW
Pastor, Prospect Street M. E. Church

Text: "Behold My Hands" Luke 24, 39.

ONLY human beings have hands, and the human hand is the handiwork of God The hands of a child are soft, weak, helpless, and innocent. In the child's hands are slumbering many powers and possibilities. Possibly they will one day produce enchanting music, great works of art, and other things with mighty messages to all generations to come. The hands can bind up wounds, relieve suffering, and do great good; or they may be employed in creating trouble and heartache.

The gospels tell us repeatedly how the Son of Man touched people with his hands. A leper came to him saying, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." "And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him." And the leper was cleansed. One day two blind men followed Jesus, crying: "Thou Son of David have mercy on us" And "he touched their eyes" and they were opened. They brought little children to him, and the disciples rebuked those that brought them, but Jesus said: "Suffer the little children to come to me—And he took them in his arms, and he put his hands upon them and blessed them"

He touched the sick and they were made well. He touched the dead and they came to life. He broke bread to the hungry with his hadns, and they were fed and satisfied. Power, sympathy, love, comfort, help, and blessing are extended to human beings by his hands.

We do well if we remember that Jesus is the same today as yesterday. He knows the world of today. He knows you He knows me. He wants to touch your life, and my life with his helping hands.

"Oh, the touch of his hand in mine,
Oh, the touch of his hand in mine,
There is grace and power, for the trying hour,
In the touch of his hand in mine."

Forget it never that his hands are helping hands. Remember how the disciples once were out on the sea of Galilee. The sea became violent because of a storm. They thought themselves in peril. Then He came walking on the waves Seeing him they were afraid at first, thinking him to be a spirit, until He said "It is I be not afraid." Under the spell of the moment Peter walked upon the sea, but soon began to sink, and sinking cried "Lord save me" "And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him," and saved him.

Believe it! Oh heart believe it! The Master still helps those that call upon Him Behold His hands, they are helping hands. If your burdens are heavy, if your distress is great, if sorrow is breaking your heart; cling to those hands! Lean on the everlasting arms!

Always, His hands are saving hands. Bitter enemies one day drove cruel, ugly nails through those blessed hands, and nailed them to a cross Behold those hands, nail-pierced, and remember: "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed" You who are lost in sin and without God, and without hope in the world, behold your Saviour extending helping, saving hands to you Grasp those hands, and you will find that he still saves to the uttermost all that come to him

Behold His hands and say:
"Lord, I would clasp my hands in thine,
Nor ever murmur or repine,
Content whatever lot I see,
Since 'tis my God that leadeth me" anteed employment idea to such an extent that States Chamber of Com- merce has become its sponsor and is pressing for adherence to it. Intensive study of the technical aspects of the problem is now occupying the attention of experts in the chamber.

President Hoover has been kept informed of, and is deeply interested in the progress of the movement, which he regards of unusual importance.

Industrial and labor leaders consider the guaranteed employment idea one of the most significant developments in the relationship between capital and labor in recent years. The idea is not regarded by them or by President Hoover as a mere emergency measure for the relief of existing unemployment, but is thought to be a primary step in elimination of unexpected periods of widespread unemployment in the future.

Expected to Spread

Government officials have expressed the opinion that its adoption by the larger industries would lead gradually to favorable action by smaller business throughout the country.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in endorsing the movement said his report on July labor conditions, that the removal of the fear of unemployment would put money into circulation, which is now being stored in savings deposits and hoarded in stockings and trunks.

Public utility members of the National Electric Light association at a recent gathering appointed a committee to study the subject.

DAVIS STILL ABLE TO HANDLE METAL

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 15 — He's not quite as spry as he was when he worked as a puddler around here, but United States Senator James J. Davis always is willing to prove that he's still good for many a hard day's work. And he won't take a dare.

Davis visited the Standard Tin Plate mill at Canonsburg. One of the workmen recognized him. There was a bit of "joshing" and Davis accepted a dare to try his hand at dumping hot tin. Off went his coat and collar and the former secretary of labor put in the next half hour handling the metal.

JAPAN LEVIES FINES ON AMERICAN FLIERS

covered a motion picture camera in the plane. The fliers admitted taking some pictures but denied they had photographed fortifications. Japanese patriotic societies urged they be punished and a lengthy investigation preceded the assessment of the fine.

The judge decreed that the American fliers would be subject to imprisonment if they failed to pay their fines. He stipulated that they would be allowed a "reasonable time" to make the payments.

If jail became the alternative, the fliers would be requested to serve at the rate of 10 yen a day.

Pangborn and Herndon said, however, they would pay the fines as soon as they could cable the United States.

Fliers in Court

Vernacular newspapers quoted aviation bureau officials as asserting that Pangborn and Herndon would be prohibited from flying in Japan again. If enforced, this would mean abandonment of their planned flight to Seattle. Rengo news agency, however, said officials of the communication, foreign and home offices would confer later to decide this point.

Both fliers were in court as the decision was handed down.

The fliers abandoned their round-the-world flight in favor of a non-stop flight from Japan to Seattle, Wash., at the invitation of a Japanese newspaper.

Larger Than Expected

The fliers were stunned by the size of the fine and received an additional surprise when informed their cinema camera and six reels of film had been confiscated.

As their plane was not seized they decided to go ahead with plans for a non-stop flight to Seattle despite newspaper reports that officials would not permit them to make any more flights over Japanese territory.

American embassy officials told the aviators they would make representations to Japanese authorities in the hope a permit might be forthcoming for an ocean flight.

"The whole thing in a nutshell," said Pangborn, "is that we came to Japan under a misapprehension, thinking an emergency permit was in order. We were victims of circumstances and now we find ourselves in a dickens of a fix.

"The question agitating us now is, when do we fly or don't we fly? —that is, do we get a permit to use the plane again in starting across the Pacific?"

Must Have Permit

Herndon said: "We assured the court that the fines would be paid in a few days. The judge instructed us not to leave the city without a permit. We immediately applied for permission to go to Kamakura to spend Sunday and the permission was granted.

"We naturally are rather upset at the penalty imposed, but throughout the quiz the officials have been considerate and courteous. The heavy fine of course was a heavy blow to us and also to our friends, many newly made Japanese friends expressing sympathy in our predicament."

The chief of the supervision section of the aviation law intimated a permit for a Pacific coast flight would not be granted.

Michigan, refusing to disgrace herself by imitating the murderers, has no capital punishment. It is to be hoped that the four life sentences will keep the atrocious criminals in jail.

They murdered two girls, 15 and 17 years old, and their two high school companions. After the murders, of which the details are too horrible for narration, the four bodies were burned in the car in which the bandits trapped them.

These murderers were not the "foreigners" upon whom we are too much inclined to put the blame for our crime wave. One was a Negro, 31; the others white American youths, 19 and 22 years old.

Inmate viciousness and the crime wave multiplied tenfold by prohibition and bootlegging are responsible for the horror. The murderers had trailed the four boys and girls as they drove from a roadside inn, to park their car and meet their ghastly fate.

fighting between revolutionaries and government troops continued in the eastern part of the island even after the surrender of revolutionary leaders in the western area.

The first rebel victory over government soldiery was reported from Rancho Veloz, Santa Clara province, with eight soldiers killed and numerous casualties attending. Government troops were routed in a brisk battle and awaited further reconnaisance before renewing the engagement.

Surrender Dramatic

The surrender of General Menocal and his party came in dramatic fashion, reports from the interior said. They were sighted in the afternoon by the gunboat near the banks of the Red River Verde in the extreme western part of the province. Troops ashore were notified and they forced the fugitives toward the vessel, where they gave themselves up without resistance.

They had been without food for many hours and were exhausted by their long flight through the hill and lake regions of western Cuba.

NOT OVER, SAYS CAPOTE

Declares Uprising Will Continue Till Machado Rule Ends.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 15 — Dr. Domingo Mendez Capote, delegate general of the Cuban rebels, said today that the uprising would continue despite the capture of General Mario G. Menocal.

"The revolution is a movement of the people and does not depend on the successes of chieftains," he said.

"There is striking similarity between the present revolt and the Cuban war for independence against Spain, waged in 1898.

"We must recall that during our war for independence great leaders fell on the field of battle, men like Jose Marti and Jose Maceo and Antonio Maceo, but each tragedy of the war increased the ardor and courage of each man under arms until independence was achieved.

"The revolution will not end until it has fulfilled its purpose to end the oligarchical and tyrannical rule of Machado and of his congress."

In Air 11 Hour

The Lindberghs, because of crossing the international date line in the Bering sea, landed in the afternoon of the day after they took off, whereas their actual flying time was 10 hours and 49 minutes.

Karagin island, a small body of volcanic origin, lies about 25 miles off the coast of Kamchatka peninsula and is about 1,300 miles from Tokyo. The Lindberghs originally planned to end their flight at the Japanese capital, but while in Nome announced they intended to continue on around the world.

To the peasants of Karagin the plane will be a strange sight, but the Lindberghs themselves doubtless will see strange things there. It is little more than a trading post with a main village of a few crude habitations.

IRISH ORANGEMEN WRECK LOCOMOTIVE

Derailment Follows Dispute between Two Organizations

By The Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Aug. 15 A band of about 20 men wrecked a locomotive near Rich Hill early today and established a blockade along a railroad line on which delegates to the assembly of the Ancient Order of Hibernians were scheduled to travel.

The gang lifted the rails and stopped a train. They made the engineer detach the locomotive and started it full speed toward a gap it smashed up along the right-of-way and established an effective barrier against further traffic.

Their action was interpreted as a measure of reprisal against the "Irish Republican army" which prevented Orangemen from holding a meeting at Cootehill in the Free State Wednesday. It was thought that unless speedy repairs should be effective, the Hibernian assembly at Armagh would be greatly handicapped.

Rich Hill is in county Armagh, close to the border of the Free State, and is a strong orange center.

ROOSEVELT ISSUES LEGISLATIVE CALL

Special Session Set To Enlarge Powers of N. Y. City Probers.

By The Associated Press

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 15 Governor Roosevelt today issued a call for a special session of the legislature to convene on Aug. 25 for the purpose of enacting legislation broadening the powers of a committee investigating the New York City administration.

The request for the special session was made by Samuel Seabury, chief counsel for the committee, after the court of appeals ruled that a legislative resolution empowering the investigators to grant immunity to a witness was invalid. The appeal was in the case of William F. Doyle, a retired fire department horse doctor, who was sent to jail for 30 days for contempt because of his refusal to testify regarding fees he collected as an attorney before the city bureau of standards.

The committee had offered Doyle immunity if he would reveal with whom he was believed to have split fees totaling more than $1,500,000 in the last few days.

A special message the governor had hoped to have ready in connection with the announcement had not been completed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15—Final rejection today appeared to be in store for the farm board's drastic plan of destroying a third of the cotton crop in an effort to boost the price of the staple.

Four of the 14 states asked to cooperate have filed objections to the suggestion that every third row of standing cotton be plowed under. A fifth, Texas, the largest producing state whose cooperation was deemed essential for success, appeared in doubt. Governor Sterling was said yesterday at the board to have agreed to lend his assistance. The Texas chief executive later, however, issued a statement at Houston, denying he favored the board's proposal.

Corrects Impression

"I notice," he said, "the impression has gotten out that I favor plowing up one-third of this year's cotton crop. This is not the case. However, I did wire Chairman Stone of the farm board that I would gladly cooperate with him in his efforts to aid the cotton farmers.

"Mr. Stone evidently construed my message to mean that I favored his specific plan. I think it would be just as reasonable to ask the farm board to burn up part of the crop they are holding as it is to ask farmers to destroy part of their crop."

Georgia, Alabama and Florida, while opposing the board's plan, endorsed the idea of reducing the current harvest and offered substitute proposals which were not made public. South Carolina also rejected the plan.

California Not Considered

A sixth state, California, asked that it not be considered in the movement because of its small cotton production.

In addressing the plan to 14 governors, the board indicated 10 must agree to make it operative beginning Sept. 1. In return it agreed to hold its stabilization cotton for one year and urge upon cotton cooperatives the advisability of similar action in regard to their 2,100,000 bales. At least eight governors have informally expressed the opinion the board's suggestion was impractical.

Day of Personal Organs Past.

Rumblings of the battle between the Kansas City Star and Henry L. Doherty, head of the huge Cities Service company, are heard far and wide. Mr. Doherty's wrath may be measured by the $12,000,000 libel suit he has brought against the newspaper for statements it printed concerning Doherty interests. The battle had its inception in a movement to lower gas rates, supported by the Kansas City Star.

The latest broadside from the Doherty camp is an announcement that its chief has purchased an interest in the Kansas City Journal-Post, the Star's rival. It is Mr. Doherty's intention to do his firing from the Journal-Post henceforth. An agreement with the owners of that newspaper permits him to use editorial and advertising space for propaganda as he sees fit. He threatens to make the Star "so impotent that it can't be harmful to the community it pretends to serve."

Mr. Doherty, as a wealthy man, is free to use his money in this way if he sees fit. Others have tried the same thing; others have failed, as Mr. Doherty will fail. Journalism graduated from the "personal" stage years ago. The New York Times says: "If the views of a newspaper are known to the public to be dictated in its own interest by one who has bought it, they cease to be of the slightest consequence." Mr. Doherty will do well to frame that and hang it on the wall facing his desk.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch says: "Such an arrangement is unique in journalism. It will make the Journal-Post a mouthpiece for public utilities propaganda and, even if this propaganda is counteracted by opposing view in adjacent columns, the effect will be to give special pleading a preferred place in a daily newspaper. * * * When propaganda is mixed with journalism, the result can only be damaging to the latter.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger says: "The day of the personal political organ, published to promote the fortunes of a candidate or boss, is past. There are only occasional survivals. Communities in which they are published demand that a newspaper's first service shall be to the public. Newspapers should be published for the sole purpose of printing the news and independent editorial comment. * * * It is amazing that a man like Mr. Doherty, who has intelligence enough to make a success in business, should not know that a newspaper can not be used as a medium for personal propaganda."

The Baltimore Sun says: "We never heard of a kept newspaper yet that had any real influence."

Mr. Doherty, plainly, is working against his cause. Newspapers and intelligent newspaper readers will agree that he has contracted to do Cities Service company, public utilities generally and the Journal-Post a great disservice.

Senator Hebert on the Dole.

Senator Felix Hebert, of Rhode Island, chairman of the special senate committee on unemployment insurance, apparently is not impressed by the operation of the unemployment insurance plan, if one may judge by the reactions he obtained during an intensive study of such insurance, abroad as he described them while the guest of President Hoover at the latter's Rapidan camp over the week-end.

"I am firmly convinced, as a result of my study of the unemployment insurance situation in Europe," said Mr. Hebert, "that the institution of such a system in the United States would be the first step toward a national dole

"The main difficulty with the dole system, as it operates throughout Europe, with the possible exception of Italy, is that it is intertwined with politics.

"Take the situation in England, for example, where the dole is being operated at a cost of $200,000,000 annually. Supposing that the application of an idle person to be placed on the dole is refused by the local committee. The man immediately goes to his political leader. In turn the leader consults the member of parliament from his district. That man goes to his own leader and the leader consults the secretary of the treasury. As a result the man is placed on the dole whether he is eligible or not."

The operation of the dole system in Germany, the senator stated, had proved critical; so much so that a number of radical changes have been made in it, among them the cutting of agricultural workers out of the dole. In Italy, the operation of the dole system has accumulated a surplus of about 12,000,000 liras—about $480,000 in our money - which, it is estimated, will be sufficient to operate it, for the reason that dole beneficiaries seldom receive more than $1.75 a week and often the dole does not run over ten cents a week

In Washington much significance is attached to the statement of Senator Hebert by reason of the time and place at which it was given out, as it is the general view that the senator would not have expressed himself as he did while the guest of the President had his observations and views run contrary to the presidential thought on the subject.

Sugar, Bullets and Machado.

The United States is turning its attention to the sixth revolution in Cuba since the island became independent in 1902. There have been signs of growing political unrest, meaning, chiefly, dissatisfaction with President Machado. The sugar market which once caused money to flow into Cuba, has weakened, causing, also, a dangerous degree of economic unrest. High-handed methods of keeping the government in power have done the rest. Cuba is ready for revolution. If the present one does not materialize, there will be a revolution later.

American intervention in Cuban affairs is a tub of boiling water for the state department. It would like to stay out, but has been forced in on several occasions and may have to go through the ordeal again. The Platt amendment to the war department appropriation bill in 1901 gives the rule of thumb for Cuban-American relations. Article III of the amendment reads:

"That the government of Cuba consents that the United States may exercise the right to interfere for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property and individual liberty, and for discharging the obligations with respect to Cuba imposed by the treaty of Paris on the United States, now to be assumed and undertaken by the government of Cuba."

Elihu Root, as secretary of war, made this article acceptable to Cubans by assuring them that "intervention in Cuban affairs will only take place to protect the independence of the Cuban republic from foreign attack, or when a veritable state of anarchy exists within the republic. * * * The United States will come to the rescue only in extreme cases to help Cuba to preserve its absolute independence, and pray God that case may never arise."

Whatever happens, therefore, the state department may be depended on to look down its nose at Cuba until that attitude can no longer be held. An improvement in the sugar market is the only thing that could pacify Cubans completely, and that is not forthcoming. The state department, one suspects, is placing considerable emphasis on that part of the Root assurance reading "and pray God that case may never arise."

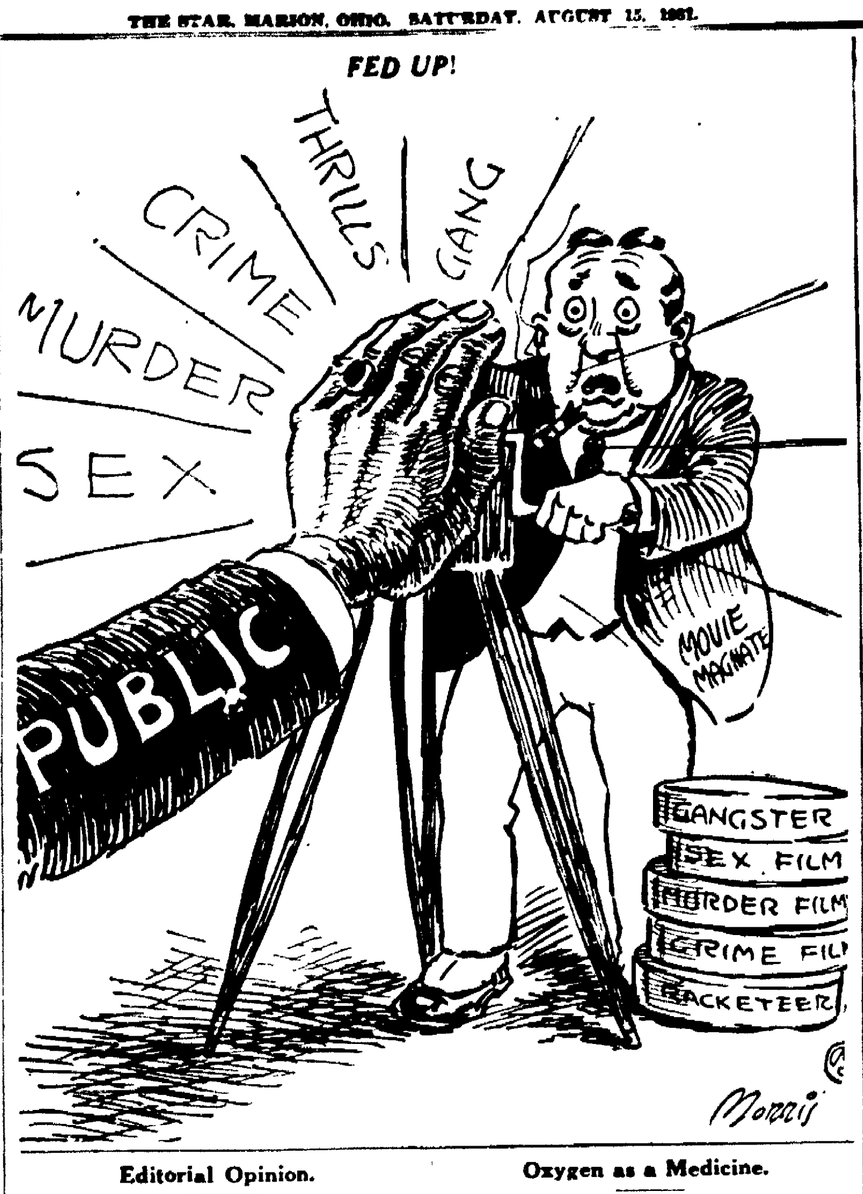
Let's Be Patient.

Public imagination has taken the bit in its teeth, and is running away with television prospects. It is common to hear that television will be practical in a year, or even that it is practical now. Five years, at the most, is allowed for it to become practical.

As a manifestation of faith in the ability of electrical engineers to perform things once undreamed-of, this is cheering, but it leaves facts far behind Assurance is given by Dr. C. B. Joliffe, chief engineer of the federal radio commission, that television is still in the early experimental stage, and that engineers can not safely say when it will become a practical medium of entertainment. In fact, engineers are not even sure they are on the right track

This does not signify that Dr. Joliffe is discouraging the public from believing that television will become common. It does signify, however, a restraining movement to keep people from balking too heavily on possibility. Television might become practical a month from now; it probably will not become practical for many years. For the present, there is the radio, still open to many improvements.

What other period in the world's history ever was so crammed with marvelous inventions that it was necessary to caution people not to get too far ahead of present possibilities? Before acceptance of new inventions was slow. People doubted. Things couldn't work There was a joker somewhere. Now, everything is possible. Men sail out of sight in the air, listen to sounds thousands of miles away, travel 300 to 350 miles an hour, and grow impatient for the time when they will be able to see things happening leagues away. And they probably will not be disappointed if they are patient.



Editorial Opinion.

BUT DOES ONE TORTURE A PARTNER?

The Wickersham commission, a few weeks since, reported that the police of American cities were hand in glove with thugs, hoodlums, slickers, racketeers and other criminals.

The Wickersham commission this week reports that the police of American cities are inhumane in their treatment of these same criminals, that their zealous application of the so called third degree is grossly brutal, if not downright fiendish.

The two reports do not jibe. Manifestly, a policeman in covert partnership with criminals does not take them into the "goldfish room" and belabor them with a rubber hose Not necessarily because he is too tender-hearted, but because the belabored ones would be likely to expose the covert partnership in order to get square.

The Wickersham commission is made up of high-minded citizens, actuated by high motives and sincerely committed to a high purpose. But apparently their first close-ups of the underworld, and their first real contacts with policemen, have come since the commission was created. However much they themselves may be convinced of the soundness of their reports, they can not make us believe that policemen generally are corrupt, nor that policemen generally are needlessly harsh in their dealings with criminals - Minneapolis Journal.

NOISE AND AMERICANS.

The Americans are world beaters on punishing themselves with unnecessary noises. They take the torture, but never pause to ponder whether they like it or not. They just go on making it worse all the time. After the slumbers of the countless thousands have been disturbed during many years by fire sirens, a New Yorker comes forth with the suggestion that fire trucks warn at night with a strong shaft of light. He would substitute this silent signal for the screeching siren. He even suggests the possibility of making the shaft of light distinctively red The idea is worth trying both for fire trucks and ambulances.

But at their worst, fire and ambulance sirens might be classed as necessary noises. But there are hundreds of other dins that have no such justification. For example, all the inane, raucous, strident, blatant impudent types of automobile horns apparently installed for no other purpose than for irresponsible drivers to toy with as they cruise through quiet residential sections late at night. Tolerance of such is indication of American noise absurdity. --Toledo Blade.

BELT LINES AROUND CITIES.

Minneapolis, Rochester and LaCrosse will have within the next year belt highways over which through traffic will be routed around these cities.

The Minnesota highway department has already announced the contract for the Rochester improvement. It will carry the traffic on Highways No. 7 and No. 20 around the edge of the city.

The belt highway in Minneapolis will be built jointly by the state and county and will cost nearly $2,000,000. It will divert the through traffic on seven highways outside of the city.

At La Crosse the county board and city council are cooperating in the proposed cut-off that will relieve congestion in the business district.

All of which goes to show that Winona is just a few years ahead in this field, as the result of the Sarnia street routing of Highway No. 3.

The removal of through traffic from local traffic-congested streets has been found to be a big forward step in the development of safe automobile travel.--Winona Herald.

What Will Better Marion?

The following is the answer of one citizen to the question, "What Will Better Marion?"—the second in the questionnaire circulated by Dr. Carl W. Sawyer to get a comprehensive insight into the community feeling regarding our home city, in the hope of arriving at a remedy, for handicaps, if any, from which Marion may suffer. From day to day, answers of various citizens to the same question will be given publicity on this page.

General improvement of the city to promote home town pride among all of our more than 30,000 population. No community can get ahead unless the general run of its inhabitants are happy and contented. Right now it is rather difficult to bring this about, but with better conditions developing, the task is going to be easier. Make the town attractive and cheerful, keep the uptown business district clean and bright. Provide places of entertainment and recreation for working people and their families

If the town in general has an aspect of being run down at the heel, the people in it are likely to have the same sentiment. I am of the opinion that there is a lack of readiness on the part of Marionites who have the means to invest as liberally as they should in the community. Money is needed to put things across and naturally it should come from only one source, the people who have it.

Oxygen as a Medicine.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Oxygen is a gas found in the air It is one of the elements vital to the sustenance of life.

In larger and purer doses than we get in ordinary breathing, oxygen is used as a curative agent in certain diseases. The value of this gas was greatly appreciated during the World war in the treatment of gas poisoning. In addition, the gas is employed in certain stages of pneumonia.

Following the discovery that this gas is important in combating disease, it uses have been many. Oxygen is now prescribed for various diseases and many lives have been saved by its vitalizing effects.

In pneumonia, as a result of a material decrease of normal lung tissue, there is too great a limitation upon the quantity of air. The body gets less oxygen than it needs. It follows, of course, that any means of giving more oxygen will benefit the patient.

The old-time and tragic effects of diphtheria are rarely seen in this generation. Due to our modern methods of guarding agains, this dread disease we seldom see it.

In a severe attack of diphtheria, the windpipe of the struggling child becomes partially closed. Almost at once the body suffers from the lack of oxygen. In such cases the administration of oxygen has carried many a sufferer through the crisis of the disease.

Resuscitation from the evil effects of exposure to illuminating gas or from immersion in water, has been made possible by giving oxygen. In those cases, it has saved many lives.

A very important use of oxygen has been in reviving infants at birth. Tiny infants born blue, with great difficulty in breathing, have given the attendants many anxious moments. If not properly handled, such babies will die because of their inability to breathe. In these cases oxygen has been miraculous in its action. Many a happy mother can give thanks to the use of this gas in resuscitating her infant.

There are other important uses for this valuable gas. As time goes on, science discovers more and more methods of combating disease and death We have progressed tremendously since the days when our forefathers and foremothers depended on "herbs" and "leeches" for overcoming disease.

Ancient Exaggerators.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

It is probably true that the real difficulty in founding a truly scientific theory of the universe was the almost incorrigible propensity of the ancients to spin amazing yarns. The imaginations of the philosophers, the astrologers and the priests ran riot. There was nothing too fanciful or imaginative for them either to conceive or to narrate. Burnet is quite right in his statement, found in Early Greek philosophy, that the real advance made by the scientific men of Miletus was that they left off telling tales!

The first cosmologies were largely the results of crude imagination and unbridled fancy. Thales taught that the earth was a disc, circular in shape, floating on the primal substance water, just as a round piece of plank floats on a lake. To Anaximander, as to many other philosophers and thinkers, the earth was flat and placed at the center of the world; and the sun was not a great burning contellation but a hole in the solid sky through which could be discerned the prevasive element fire filling the rim of the universe' This is much like the views of primitive peoples living in Africa today.

Anaxagoras was more logical than some of the other philosophers. Whereas he believed that the other bodies in the universe resembled the earth and were composed of the same kind of matter, Anaximenes was poetic in his point of view; for while holding that the earth, a presumed condensation of air, was flat, he believed that the firmament was like a vaulted ceiling or inverted bowl, into which the stars were driven like nails. Xenophanes and Heraclitus accepted unhesitatingly the doctrine that the earth was flat.

It is now believed by historical students that Parmenides, who may be called the founder of the Eleatic school, was the first of the philosophers to grasp the idea of a spherical earth. This idea was adopted by the Pythagorean school. At first it was accepted that the earth was motionless; but after a time the natural question arose as to whether or not the earth might not be in motion. Two of the philosophers of the Pythagorean school, Philolaus and Nicetas, played with this idea of the mobility of the earth. At first this view was held to be heretical by the orthodox Pythagoreans; but subsequently it was adopted by both Heracleides and Aristachus.—Copyright, 1931, International Feature Service, Inc.

When Grant Hung in the Balance.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

One blustery night in early March, 1862, President Lincoln, after an all-evening talk with his close friend and advis ., Colonel A. K. McClure, made a momentous decision. It was in effect that he would not yield to the strong popular demand that General Grant be superseded in high command. Up to the battle of Shiloh, which was yet several weeks ahead, Grant had not been particularly successful, and the growing lack of confidence in him was resting heavy on the president.

McClure tells the story in his book, "Lincoln and Men of War Times." They were alone in the cabinet room in the White House, sitting beside a large open fireplace. Lincoln characteristically tipped his chair back and with his prodigiously long legs, placed his feet on the high mantel and with his face turned down toward the fire sat for the most part in silence, running his bony fingers occasionally through his bristly hair.

As usual when he sought information from a companion he said only a word here and there, enough to keep Colonel McClure talking. McClure admits that he was of the opinion of the great majority in the North, that Grant was a failure as a military leader and he had gone to the White House to urge upon Mr. Lincoln the urgency of doing something to save his administration.

Finally the president removed his feet from the mantel, sat straight up in his chair and turning to McClure, his face bright with the reaction of a decision made, he said: "McClure, I can't spare that man; he fights" The crisis was passed so far as Lincoln was concerned. For the immediate future, Grant would be continued in command. Before the two men met again Grant had proved his ability and McClure was glad to acknowledge that he had been guilty of hasty judgment and an inclination to yield to popular sentiment, and that Mr. Lincoln was right.

The River Thames.

BY O. O. M'INTYRE.

London, Aug. 15—The Thames seems such a dinky river for so much romancing It is no wider than the little creek back home after a spring rain. Yet to the Londoner it is a murky strip of magic. Along its bridges are always spellbound gazers looking down at the gargoyles from a parapet.

Every hour of the day and most of the night it flings its challenge to the huddled streets and market places and brings loiterers to the embankment for a stolen moment or so. There is no swift current to the Thames. Instead it swirls sluggishly and depressingly about its weathered stones.

Strings of linked barges float lazily by and now and then a thin mast. And that is all. Along the Thames is a Cleopatra needle just like the one in our Central park. But the fiercely biting London weather has exacted its toll. Whereas ours is well preserved this one is chipped, charred and black.

Fifty years of London have done it far greater harm than all of its 3,000 years in Egypt. Soon it must come down and its remnants carted to a museum. To me these Cleopatra needles flick the imagination. On this one Rameses the Great carved his name.

Moses, a priest in Heliopolis, beheld it every day. Once Egyptian slaves floated it along the Nile for the pleasure of Pharaoh. It was moved from Alexandria to England encased in an enormous cylinder of steel. Many lives were lost bringing it through the tempestuous Bay of Biscay.

Along benches of the embankment this morning were clutters of victims of the "bole" which every intelligent Englishman believes must be stopped if Britain is to survive They have learned to live without work by this governmental support and ambition is cloyed.

There are many young men in the empire today who, like columnists, never worked a single day in their lives. They arise at noon, drift to public parks and sit like so many statues until time to go for something to eat or return to lodgings for sleep.

Washington, Aug. 15—Every year there assembles in the capital an unorganized yet closely-knit group to pay tribute to a man each regards as his "Old Master."

The group is composed of those men who since as far back as 1902, have served a year as law clerk and secretary to Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the supreme court

Usually it is on the occasion of the venerable justice's birthday. They make their way to a big red brick house in I street where Holmes receives them.

These men regard this annual visit as a sort of pilgrimage. They come from all sections of the country. Some are high in the councils of the nation, some have attained distinction as professors of law, and others are just plain lawyers.

But on these annual occasions they are all the same—pupils of a great master.

For that is pretty much how these men regard Justice Holmes. Since he established the custom of bringing down from Harvard each year the honor man of the graduating law class, the position has been a coveted one.

There men regard a year spent with Justice Holmes as a sort of post-graduate course—the ideal way of completing their preparatory legal training.

For he takes them in hand as a teacher, counselor and friend. Each comes in intimate contact with the man hailed by many as the greatest jurist of the day. In his office at the capitol, in the quiet of his study at home and during the summer in the rambling old house in Massachusetts, built by "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" and dubbed by the son "Beverly-by-the-Depot," they work with him side by side.

It is experience impossible to obtain in another way.

Westerners, southerners and easterners have served their apprenticeship with Justice Holmes. And each year they come back to pay him tribute.

This year the group was the largest in several years. Fifteen of the former law clerks gathered in Washington last March on the occasion of his ninetieh birthday to greet him. It was the largest delegation in years to enter the door of the Holmes home, because with advancing years the justice's social contacts have narrowed.

Leland B. Duer, of New York, who served with Justice Holmes from 1909 to 1910 was the ranking member of the party. Robert Wales, his present secretary, was the youngest.

Dinner Stories.

"Do you think women improve politics?"

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, after listening to the conversation on the front porch I'll say this for them: If they ever start an investigation they'll find out something."

"Broke? Why, I thought you had something laid up for a rainy day."

"That's the dickens of it—had to spend it all getting over sunstroke."

"Since your son came home from college I suppose he is strong for all kinds of uplift stuff?"

"Well, he's strong for raising Cain, but he's not making any effort to lift the mortgage off the farm."

"I see a New York doctor predicts a revolt against high medical fees."

"The people must be educated to contract less expensive diseases."

Akron Woman Asks Compensation in Morrow County Court.

Special to The Star

MT. GILEAD, Aug. 15—Mrs. Bertha Baughman of Akron has filed suit in the Morrow county common pleas court against William G. Motz also of Akron asking that a jury be impanelled to determine her right to participate in the funds of the workmen's compensation as a result of the death of her husband John Baughman.

Baughman was fatally injured by a truck and trailer which he was attempting to couple at a point in the Mt. Gilead-Columbus road near Cardington on the night of Dec. 30, 1926. In the petition now filed it is alleged that he was in the employ of Motz who although operating a business coming under the provisions of the compensation law had failed to comply with the terms of the law. Two hearings have been held by the commission in charge of the administration of the compensation law and in both Mrs. Baughman was denied any compensation the finding of the commission being that her husband was not in Motz' employ at the time. The final decision was made less than a month ago by the commission and the case was filed in the courts here Friday. No date has been set for trial of the case as Judge W. P. Vaughan is holding court in another county this week.

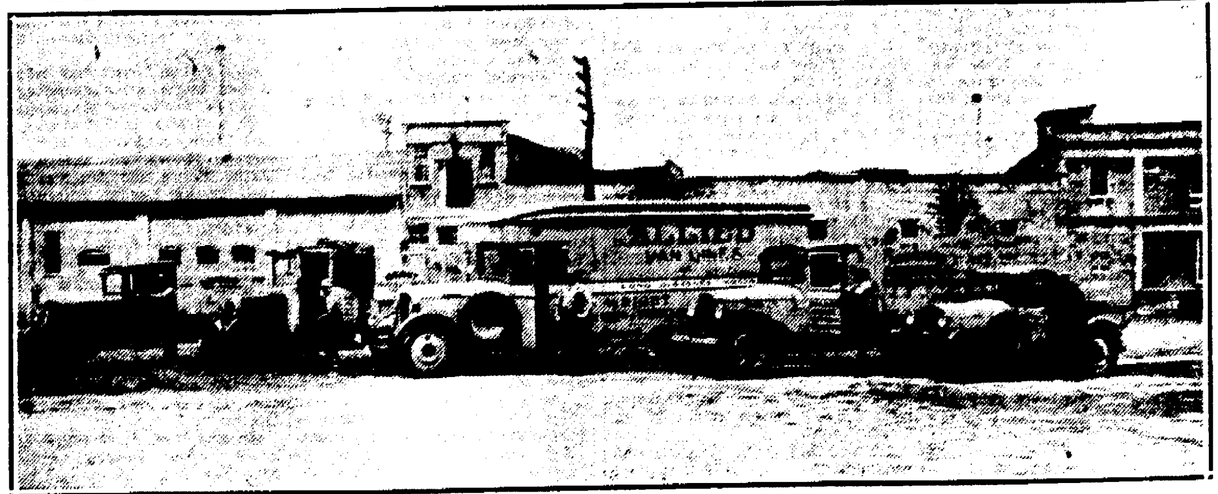
STYLES CHANGE IN MOVING BUSINESS



Part of Equipment as Used by Wright Co. at Present.

WRIGHT CO. READY FOR ANY JOB

Quite a contrast in the type of moving equipment used at the present time as compared to only 20 years ago. Then all local moving of household goods and transportation of merchandise was performed by horse drawn wagons. The charge for moving was by the load, whereas today the rate is by the hour, depending upon the capacity of the motor truck used. A distance of 40 miles was considered a very long distance moving job, which would be accomplished at the rate of from four to six miles per hour, depending upon the condition of the roads, weather, bridges, etc. Today a long distance moving job by motor truck is one of from 100 to 1,000 miles, usually accomplished at an average speed of from 25 to 40 miles per hour. The first motor truck used by this company was the heavy duty, low geared, solid tire type, the maximum speed of which was 18 miles an hour. Today we have the high speed, six-cylinder vans, pneumatic tired, fully equipped with pads, covers and packing for the protection of goods transported. Will the airplane be brought into this service tomorrow?

There are a lot of amusing incidents constantly coming up in the moving business. One of the drivers came in the office the other day and said that when he had placed the last piece of furniture in the house from the van he asked the lady customer if there was anything else he could do. The quick reply was, "Oh yes, while you are here could you and your helper move the house back just a foot?" We recently moved two van loads of furniture for a customer to a point 500 miles distant and the driver of the second van was given a canary bird, with special instructions as to its diet, water to be given, ventilation. The bird was carried in the cab of the truck where it was under close observation at all times. Unfortunately this truck broke down 125 miles from destination, making it necessary to transfer the load. The bird, together with the explicit instructions as to its care, was transferred to the driver of our relief truck and delivered at destination in perfect condition; in fact its mistress thanked the driver profusely for the excellent care rendered throughout the trip. Twenty minutes later the bird was dead,—she had given it an ice cold beverage and a cold water bath.

The property of the Paddock Transfer & Storage Co., established in 1880, was purchased by G. A. Wright in July, 1924, and the business recently incorporated under the name of the Wright Transfer & Storage Co. Services rendered by them as follows:

Storage for household goods and merchandise. Those who inspect storage space are impressed with its cleanliness, its dryness, and its systematic efficient arrangement.

Moving household goods assuredly is a job requiring the services of experts; experience gained by years of service. (Two of the men appearing in the 1910 photo shown above, are still in this organization.) If moving to another city goods will be carefully packed and crated for shipment by freight or transported in weatherproof vans, all of which carry necessary cargo insurance. As agents of the Allied Van Lines, Inc., national long distance movers, they are enabled to offer for especially long moves of household goods weatherproof containers of various cubical capacity, which containers can be loaded and packed and sealed or locked at the house, moved by their trucks to the freight station and the contents not disturbed or handled until unloaded at their new home at point of destination.

Mothproofing, a guarantee service, provided in your home or at their largest warehouse. Overstuffed furniture, rugs, furs, clothing.

Cartage. With seven trucks, ranging in capacity from the largest to the smallest, both open and closed bodies, a service of delivery is provided from the smallest package to the largest safes, machines, etc.

In their piano sales room will be found an expensive display of pianos of the most modern styles in grands and uprights, also a full line of musical merchandise.

NON-MEMBER BARRED FROM USE OF NAME

Washington Man Denied Right To Call Self "Realtor."

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The right of members of the National Association of Real Estate Boards to exclusive use of the term "Realtor" which they originated was upheld here on July 15 in a decision handed down by the supreme court of the District of Columbia. David E. Barry, "his clerks, agents, servants, and employes" were enjoined from employing the term in any way in the future.

This is the thirteenth decision given to the Real Estate association and its members. The association invented the designation to describe members of local real estate boards affiliated with it who have subscribed to its rules of conduct and code of ethics. Objection to non-member Barry raising a sign, in front of his place which declared himself as being approved by this organization when he was not, was made by the Washington Real Estate Board, who with the National association were plaintiffs in the case.

This is the first supreme court decision on this matter. The other decisions were given by nine circuit courts and three district courts.

KESSLER 25 YEARS IN WORK

All Materials Sold by This Company Are Applied by Expert Workmen.

The Superior Roofing Co., located at 150 north State street and owned by A. L. Kessler is the only firm in Marion doing an exclusive roofing business.

Previous to coming to Marion nearly three years ago, Mr Kessler was for 22 years engaged in the roofing business Mr. Kessler not only knows how roofing should be applied, but knows also how it is manufactured.

Roofs Insured

"Any roof sold by us," says Mr Kessler "is applied by our expert roofers" We know our men understand how to put on a roof and therefore with every roof we sell we give an insurance policy" This policy insures the roof for five years against any defect in application or material and also against the elements such as wind, hail and tornado. The insurance can be renewed for another five year period. Any roof applied by the Superior Roofing Co. should last not only the five years while insured, but should last as long as 35 years or for the full period of the life of the average house.

The Superior Roofing Co handles thatch shingles, Arro-Lock shingles, Super-Tite shingles, Gladiator shingles, Grip-Lock shingles, Hexagon shingles, Strip shingles and Diamond Point shingles Of these different shingles the Super-Tite are the best to put on your home according to Mr. Kessler Any make of shingle handled by this company can be applied right over your old roof assuring the home owner little, if any, inconvenience during the process of application

Meets Requirements

As a member of the National Roofing association, the local company has the distinction of being the only firm in the city belonging to this organization In order to become a member of this group the following requirements have to be met:

1. Experience in applying roofs
2. Highest class workmanship
3. Highest quality materials
4. A record of responsibility.
5. Fair dealing
6. Financial stability.
7. Honest guarantee
8. Prompt and efficient service
9. Reasonable prices.
10. Integrity.

Only a firm meeting these 10 requirements may sell insured roofs.

No chain is stronger than its weakest link, likewise no home is better than its roof. Due to the vital part a roof plays in the health, happiness and protection of the home, if your present roof has lived its life of usefulness, particularly as to waterproofing, fire-resisting and beauty, do not delay in obtaining a new one

Watch Water Spots

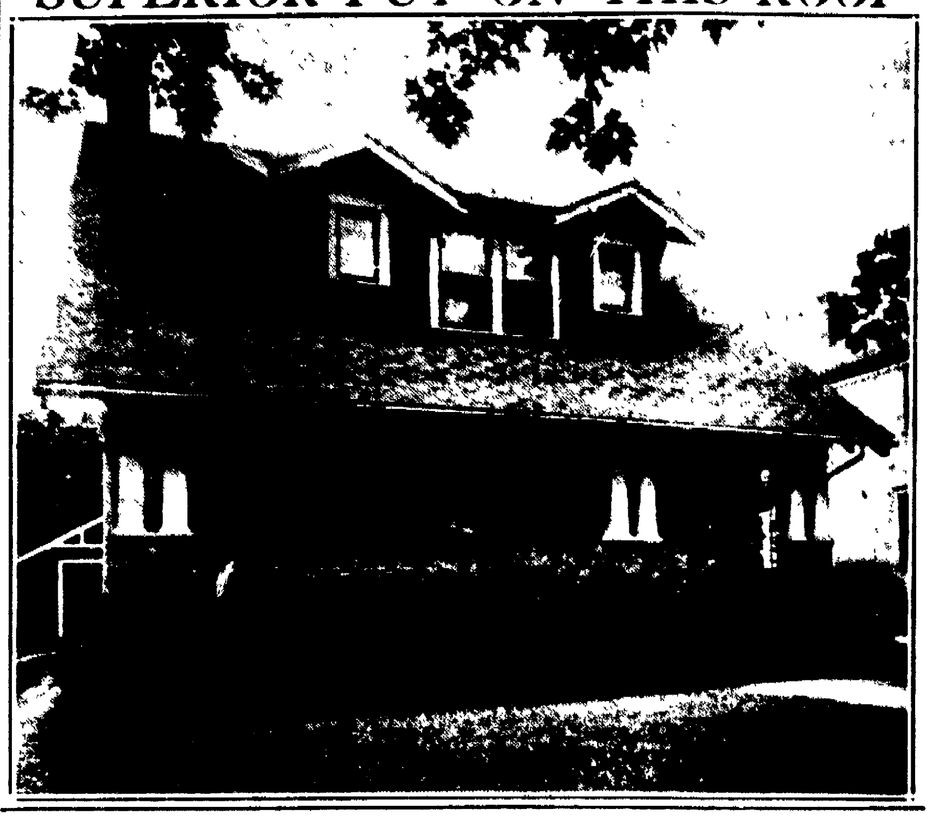
It is not necessary for water spots to appear on the plaster of your residence to indicate your roof has served its time; on the contrary, when a roof has reached this point, water has, invariably, been reaching your roof foundation (rafters, sheathing boards, sill plate, etc.) for some time, starting deterioration of this important part of your house

When wooden shingles begin to appear weather beaten, or are split or curled, the wise homeowner will then reroof, thus saving himself needless expense and worry later on

The appearance of your roof should be a matter of personal pride, as the outside of a home reflects the character of its occupant. The Superior Roofing Co, offers terms or cash and you may be assured that you will have a good roof when this company completes your job

When you buy a roof from the Superior Roofing Co, you don't have to take its word for the value of the roof. Take that of an insurance company which backs Mr. Kessler's roofs with their assets. If the insurance company was not certain of the quality of Superior roofs and the superior workmanship applying these roofs, they certainly would not insure them.

SUPERIOR PUT ON THIS ROOF



Whitewashed Brick Home French in Spirit

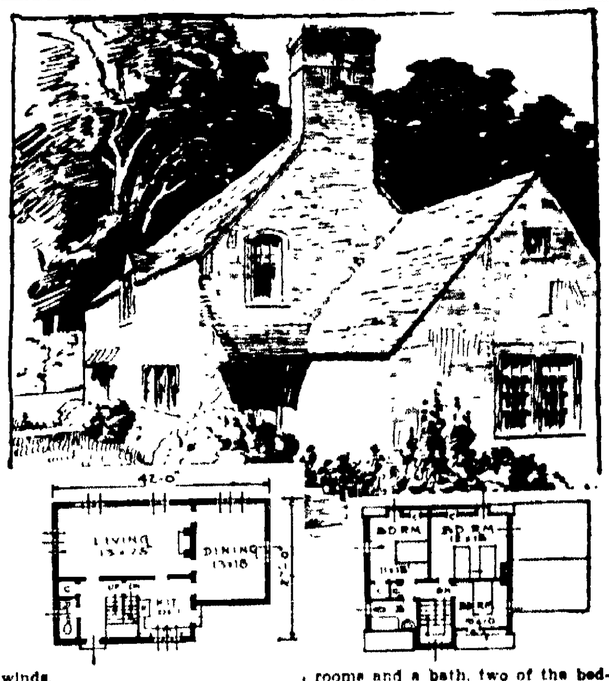
This cottage French, in inspiration, gains charm through a harmonious variety in materials and in attractive little touches of design.

It is built of whitewashed brick, with a roof of tile or slate, pleasingly contrasting, and the plan provides generous living space.

With the proper plans and specifications, the house can be built by the experienced local mason and carpenter No intricate and difficult construction details are presented.

For example the primitive frames around the windows and doors are easily made by the carpenter. Such hand-made work is in keeping with the spirit of the design.

As the plan indicates, the large living room and the dining room have abundant light and cross-ventilation. By having the kitchen and entrance face the north, these two main rooms will have the benefit of the sun in winter and be shielded from winter's chill winds.



A porch is not necessary if a terrace is built in the rear and an awning pulled over it But particularly in southern climes the advantage of a porch off the living room is one that will repay the construction costs

The arrangement of the kitchen, front entrance and stairs is such as to reduce the number of openings necessary in front and thus preserve the beauty of the simple brick walls

Upstairs, there are three bedrooms and a bath, two of the bedrooms having ventilation from two sides. The bath is over the downstairs lavatory, centralizing the plumbing and reducing costs.

The lot should be 80 by 125 feet Placing the living room the long way of the house gives an advantage for an inside lot

Small pots of flowers around the main and kitchen entrances, a lawn or flower garden off the living and dining rooms -these suggest themselves And perhaps there will be space left for a vegetable garden.

Just Things

BY EDNA S. DUTTON

Weather

WEATHER sniffers, (those folks who do their daily dozen and then step out so jauntily onto the veranda, scan the horizon like an exhibit-A sky scanner and inhale deeply) sniffed something the last few mornings to make them think of coal bins, school books, county fairs, football, world series and whatever else comes with the autumn. Not that we hope all this is lurking just around the corner for we haven't begun to get our nickel's worth out of our summer wardrobe, but that was the consensus of opinion of the sniffers. It is agreed however, that the hot weather and humidity as conversation timber was getting somewhat threadbare and the turning of the tide along that line was something of a relief. But with school busses getting all polished up and other signs of the times we guess it won't be long now.

Budgets

IN this day of budgeting till it hurts and then some, we grew curious to know just what a budget was. We knew it meant something like the parceling out of funds or time which never seemed to parcel out right, but just what those who know words and why said about it we never knew. One authority gives the definition as "bag with its contents; hence a stock or store; the annual financial statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer." We rather fall for the last definition for at least it might ease the blow somewhat to think of one's self as a chancellor of a budget even if it didn't work out right.

Doing Things

WE should hate to be responsible for the consequences should someone invent a machine that would register all the things we intended to do during the day and set them forth in firey type a mile high at the end of the day's toil and moil. There would be the letters we were sure we were going to write, the telephone call we were going to make in regard to a friend's health, the book we intended to return, the dress we intended to mend, the poor little kitten we intended to find a home for, the answer we were going to look up for an interested person and what not. Even to think of it gives us high blood pressure.

"No," said Nelly. "You are to go to our house when you return. Pompey and Sadie (Sadie was Pompey's wife) "have everything ready for you." The marquesa had expected to go there for the night, but later—

"Later," said Nelly, "you are to come back here. How do you expect me to stay without you?"

"You'll be going back yourself, old dear," Kirk said. "You're nearly well."

Nelly had known nothing of Kirk's plans for an immediate marriage, nor of Juanita's later refusal to marry him at all.

Nelly would have opined that Kirk, the host, had even less right to insist on marriage than he had to propose it.

But even Nelly could see that the marquesa was determined to end her visit with them in either place.

Juanita wondered. Was it because the marquesa had made such a comedy of herself the night of Adrian's dinner, or had Divitt ordered her return?

The marquesa, Juanita knew, kept in not infrequent touch with Divitt.

On the evening of her return from Caprice she had telephoned him asking for her lorgnettes, making casual reference to their outing in the yacht, to the presence of Madame Fouche and Adrian. . . . Juanita could hear her without listening. They could all hear her. Singularly enough, the lorgnettes had never come.

Again, the sea wind had blown into Juanita's room one night a bit of paper and she had picked it up and read it, supposing it a note for herself.

The words had made no sense. Apparently it was something in code and unfinished. But it was the marquesa's writing, and the marquesa being out, Juanita had carried it back to the place from which it probably had blown, the marquesa's desk.

Next day the marquesa had put the paper into an envelope and addressed it to Divitt.

The incident had troubled Juanita somewhat. Inevitably she had suspected that the letter was about herself.

Divitt was keeping a watch on her movmeents through the marquesa, and anybody could see what was going on between herself and Kirk.

Divitt did not intend that she should marry and leave and perhaps betray him. How easily she could have married Kirk and escaped both Divitt and the marquesa! Yet Kirk himself had barred that way. "What do you expect of a girl in that place? . . . They all have fantastic tales . . . Always unwilling . . ."

When his kind eyes had looked at her those nights in the parlor, sustaining her, he had been taking it for granted that she was a mere woman of the streets . . . A fantastic tale indeed! . . .

He would listen kindly, if she told it to him, imploring him to believe. His eyes would be as kind as they had been in Divitt's.

He might even affect to believe her . . . "What was she before she went there?" he had been asked. That other thing she had had to tell him.—How could she tell him now? How could she tell him anything?

The marquesa consented to spend the rest of the week at the Stanard home, but Monday she must return to the Tijon. Juanita was glad of this firm decision, regretful only of the delay.

Kirk's importunities, silent and spoken, were becoming more than she could bear.

"You love this other man, Juanita," he had said, and Juanita had not denied, permitting the marquesa's fiction to shelter her.

But Kirk on their last evening in Biloxi had demanded a more definite confirmation of his words. They had been sitting together on the veranda, a little apart from Nelly and the marquesa, Adrian and his mother having returned home.

"Is that it, Juanita?" Kirk had asked. "You love him best, after all?"

She had answered after a pause "The past has its hold on us."

"What sort of hold?" Kirk asked "Is it love?"

But she had said, "Don't ask me any more."

After a time he told her, "You aren't going on to California, as the marquesa says. You are going back to Spain."

And she had answered, truthfully enough, "I don't know where I'm going."

It had been useless for him to say as he had said next day in one of their brief instants alone, "You are not happy, Juanita. Even if you won't marry me, let me do something—anything—to help you."

They had just ridden in from Biloxi. The marquesa was scuttling up the stair, following Pompey and their bags.

In the dim hall Kirk had caught Juanita's hand., holding her back She had smilled up at him, leaving her hand in his, knowing an instants poignant happiness

"I am happy," she had said with brave, soft eyes; had turned from him, following the marquesa to their rooms.

And there on the bed had lain the new dress—black tulle with a line of red roses down the back black slippers and a little spangled fan.

Juanita wore the dress that evening, coming down the stair to find Kirk waiting, tall in his evening clothes, his eyes troubled, yet lighting at sight of her.

The marquesa had on the red satin dress with the beaded red cape she had worn at the Comus ball. She seemed cross and rather abstracted, yet alert whenever Kirk spoke to Juanita, however casually, as they rode to the Cranshaws'.

Perhaps, if the place cards were kind, he would sit next to Juanita, reflected Kirk, and surely they would dance after dinner.

Juanita's change of heart could not last. It had come too suddenly, had taken place almost before his eyes that night at Tarpon Point Something had been said—he could not account for it.

Moon of Delight had started it. If the men in their alcoholic mirth had accused him of having an affair with the Moon; if he himself had expressed to Juanita any mysterious attraction to the Moon, he could have understood it

But he had taken care to do just the reverse, and she had resented even that.

To Be Continued

2,000 Years Ago And Today

By The Schaffner Queen Co.

Much noise, pomp and ceremony attended burial rites in ancient times. When a pagan of wealth and position passed away, mourners were hired for the occasion—and many of his personal possessions were interred with him.

Queer weapons, utensils, ornaments and furnishings have been unearthed. One of the most unique is the luxurious golden chariot found in the tomb of the Egyptian King Tut-Ankh-Amen.

With the coming of Christianity, thinking reached a higher plane. Funeral observances achieved more sincerity and simplicity.

The progressive funeral director, today, disparages ostentious display. His service is quiet and dignified—the result—careful, efficient plans, executed with exactitude.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

THERE was something in Philip Veritzen's voice as he asked me what I thought of Avis Arlen, which aroused every bit of combativeness in me. Perhaps I imagined it, but it seemed to me there was a certain smugness about the question as if he were immensely complacent about something. All the suspicion aroused by the open pursuit of Noel by Avis Arlen and the evident approval of her conduct by her mother and Philip Veritzen rushed back upon me. Was Noel's father trying to kill the spirit of the solemn pact he had with me not to interfere with his son's betrothal with Dicky's niece, while pretending to keep the letter of the contract? I resolved to seize the opening he had given me and bring him out into the open, if possible.

"What do you mean? As a wife for Noel?" I asked coolly.

I had startled him, I realized that, with a malicious little thrill.

He stared at me with his eyebrows slightly lifted, and then he was guilty of the banal question that I have often used, but which I would never expect from Philip Veritzen.

"What do you mean?"

"Just that," I said, and I gave an emphatic little nod, trying to appear as much like what Lil calls a "feminine nit-wit" as possible

"You surely have seen how determined in pursuit of your son the young woman is."

"A Sweet, Naive Child"

Mr. Veritzen's eyebrows drew together portentously.

"Is that what you think of my little friend?" he asked. "That she is what our mid-Victorian friends would call a designing woman?"

His voice was playful, but there was that in it which told me that my criticism of his dead friend's daughter had displeased him.

"What do you call her?" I asked saucily.

"A sweet, naive child—an unconscious little flirt, it is true, but who likes Noel immensely and is frank and childlike enough to show her liking without caring about the opinion of other people."

I had hard work to repress a grin at his fatuity. Why was it, I wondered, that men of Philip Veritzen's mentality and shrewdness in judging human nature were always blind to the wiles of girls of Avis Arlen's type part moron and part shrewd woman of the world?

"I am not disputing that," I said, "but is the young woman in ignorance of the bethrothal of Noel and Mary?"

He eyed me warily.

"I do not know what Noel has told her," he said "He doesn't confide his affairs of the heart to me, but I do not see why the fact should particularly concern Miss Arlen. A betrothal is not a marriage, you know."

I lifted my eyes and looked at him steadily.

"Does that mean," I asked, "that you have repented of the solemn pact you made with me about Noel and Mary during last Christmas time?"

For a moment, there was a flaming something in Philip Veritzen's eyes as he bent them upon me.

"Two to Keep a Bargain"

"It takes two to make a pact and two to keep it," he said quickly.

Then he stopped short and looked at me oddly.

"Forgive me," he said quickly, I should not have said that."

My face felt as if it had been standing over a hot stove, baking griddle cakes. I knew that my cheeks must be an ugly brick red, for I suddenly had realized the meaning of both his impetuous speech and his apology.

Stripped of all disguise, his words could mean but one thing. When he had promised me that he would sanction the betrothal of Noel and Mary, he had expected in return that I would listen to and accept his protestations of love for me. In his opinion, I had not fulfilled my part of the pact, and he felt under no obligation to keep his.

But he had apologized! Did that mean he was big enough to forget that he had expected a reward from me which I could not give him, and would keep his part of the bargain? Or was it simply an empty, courteous gesture and had he reserved the right to do everything in his power to separate Noel from Mary short of openly flouting their betrothal"

Again I moved into the open.

"Will you forgive me if I ask you why you are trying to substitute Avis Arlen for Mary in Noel's life?"

In all his life, I think he never was nearer a violent explosion of anger, something abhorrent to his poised mentality, his controlled emotions. His body stiffened, his hands tightened upon the arms of his chair, and his eyes—I had the sensation of looking at white-hot metal. But when at last he answered me, his voice was cold and controlled.

"You certainly have courage, milady," he said. "I do not think anyone else in the world would have dared to ask me such a question, I would not forgive it in anyone else. but—but you are privileged."

"It concerns me, too, nearly — Mary is very dear to me—or I should never have ventured to put it—or to repeat it."

I emphasized the last words and looked at him with apparently calm expectation of an answer, although it took a distinct effort to keep my voice from shaking. No one knew better than I the risk I ran in thus offending the great producer by calling him to account for his conduct.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

TODAY was barbecu day. And it was the first tning I thought about when I woke up, and I told Jubilee about it when I let him down by the rope in his teeth, and when I had milked the dummed brutes and come in to feed my face it was all that was talked of at breakfast, and me and the bunch talked about it all the way to the pasture. Frenchy said his father was good at it. He said his father could barbecu a cow. I thought he was trying to spoof me. I told him he couldn't get a cow in the barbecu thing he made in our yard, but he said some are made big enough to hold cows. I wouldn't mind if he would barbecu our cows if he could do it without hurting them.

Peanuts was hanging around inside the pasture gate waiting to see if I was still mad at him, and when he found out that I was he streeked it acrosst the pasture with me after him, and he went through the brush like a windstorm, and I let him go. I'll get him yet. After we had a swim we all went to my house and Frenchy's father had built there and made a fire in the barbecu thing and went away, so we stuck around and watched it, then he came back and he had a basket full of white bundles, and they were chickens, all cleaned up, and when the fire got down to coals he put the chickens in on the grate, and there were eight half chickens, and when they began to get hot Frenchy's father kept brushing them with something made out of butter and other things, and when it got near supper time my mother got the table ready in the house, and when Frenchy's father said the chickens was done my father brought out a big platter and took them in. Then Frenchy and his father came in and we each had half a chicken. Were they good? Boy! After we had et my ant played the piano, then Frenchy's father said he would go home and get his fiddle, and my ant got up and said she would go with him, but my mother said, "Why not send your little boy and Thomas Aristides?" So he said all right, and my ant looked at my mother like she was trying to pick out a good place to bite her. When we got the fiddle and got back Frenchy's father certainly did tear off some music. He even had my grandfather showing them the kind of a dance a lady he used to know named Salomey done. Everyone thought that was funny. Then Frenchy's father danced and played at the same time, and he could dance. Then I got down in the corner and put my head on the floor and held my hands behind my back and pushed myself acrosst the room as fast as I could go. I would of been all right only my head hit my grandfather's corn and I got sent to bed. So I don't know what happened after that. My father said he is going to cure me of showing off. When Annabelle Lee does anything it is smart when I do it it is showing off.

Just Things

BY EDNA S. DUTTON

Weather

WEATHER sniffers, (those folks who do their daily dozen and then step out so jauntily onto the veranda, scan the horizon like an exhibit-A sky scanner and inhale deeply) sniffed something the last few mornings to make them think of coal bins, school books, county fairs, football, world series and whatever else comes with the autumn. Not that we hope all this is lurking just around the corner for we haven't begun to get our nickel's worth out of our summer wardrobe, but that was the consensus of opinion of the sniffers It is agreed however, that the hot weather and humidity as conversation timber was getting somewhat threadbare and the turning of the tide along that line was something of a relief. But with school busses getting all polished up and other signs of the times we guess it won't be long now.

Budgets

IN this day of budgeting till it hurts and then some, we grew curious to know just what a budget was. We knew it meant something like the parceling out of funds or time which never seemed to parcel out right, but just what those who know words and why said about it we never knew. One authority gives the definition as "bag with its contents; hence a stock or store; the annual financial statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer." We rather fall for the last definition for at least it might ease the blow somewhat to think of one's self as a chancellor of a budget even if it didn't work out right.

Doing Things

WE should hate to be responsible for the consequences should someone invent a machine that would register all the things we intended to do during the day and set them forth in firey type a mile high at the end of the day's toil and moil There would be the letters we were sure we were going to write, the telephone call we were going to make in regard to a friend's health, the book we intended to return, the dress we intended to mend, the poor little kitten we intended to find a home for, the answer we were going to look up for an interested person and what not. Even to think of it gives us high blood pressure.

"No," said Nelly. "You are to go to our house when you return. Pompey and Sadie (Sadie was Pompey's wife) "have everything ready for you." The marquesa had expected to go there for the night, but later—

"Later," said Nelly, "you are to come back here. How do you expect me to stay without you?"

"You'll be going back yourself, old dear," Kirk said. "You're nearly well."

Nelly had known nothing of Kirk's plans for an immediate marriage, nor of Juanita's later refusal to marry him at all.

Nelly would have opined that Kirk, the host, had even less right to insist on marriage than he had to propose it.

But even Nelly could see that the marquesa was determined to end her visit with them in either place.

Juanita wondered. Was it because the marquesa had made such a comedy of herself the night of Adrian's dinner, or had Divitt ordered her return?

The marquesa, Juanita knew, kept in not infrequent touch with Divitt.

On the evening of her return from Caprice she had telephoned him asking for her lorgnettes, making casual reference to their outing in the yacht, to the presence of Madame Fouche and Adrian. . . . Juanita could hear her without listening. They could all hear her. Singularly enough, the lorgnettes had never come.

Again, the sea wind had blown into Juanita's room one night a bit of paper and she had picked it up and read it, supposing it a note for herself.

The words had made no sense. Apparently it was something in code and unfinished. But it was the marquesa's writing, and the marquesa being out, Juanita had carried it back to the place from which it probably had blown, the marquesa's desk.

Next day the marquesa had put the paper into an envelope and addressed it to Divitt.

The incident had troubled Juanita somewhat. Inevitably she had suspected that the letter was about herself.

Divitt was keeping a watch on her movmeents through the marquesa, and anybody could see what was going on between herself and Kirk.

Divitt did not intend that she should marry and leave and perhaps betray him. How easily she could have married Kirk and escaped both Divitt and the marquesa! Yet Kirk himself had barred that way. "What do you expect of a girl in that place? . . . They all have fantastic tales . . . Always unwilling . . ."

When his kind eyes had looked at her those nights in the parlor, sustaining her, he had been taking it for granted that she was a mere woman of the streets . . . A fantastic tale indeed! . . .

He would listen kindly, if she told it to him, imploring him to believe. His eyes would be as kind as they had been in Divitt's.

He might even affect to believe her . . . "What was she before she went there?" he had been asked. That other thing she had had to tell him.—How could she tell him now? How could she tell him anything?

The marquesa consented to spend the rest of the week at the Stanard home, but Monday she must return to the Tijon. Juanita was glad of this firm decision, regretful only of the delay.

Kirk's importunities, silent and spoken, were becoming more than she could bear.

"You love this other man, Juanita," he had said, and Juanita had not denied, permitting the marquesa's fiction to shelter her.

But Kirk on their last evening in Biloxi had demanded a more definite confirmation of his words. They had been sitting together on the veranda, a little apart from Nelly and the marquesa, Adrian and his mother having returned home.

"Is that it, Juanita?" Kirk had asked. "You love him best, after all?"

She had answered after a pause "The past has its hold on us."

"What sort of hold?" Kirk asked "Is it love?"

But she had said, "Don't ask me any more."

After a time he told her, "You aren't going on to California, as the marquesa says. You are going back to Spain."

And she had answered, truthfully enough, "I don't know where I'm going."

It had been useless for him to say as he had said next day in one of their brief instants alone, "You are not happy, Juanita. Even if you won't marry me, let me do something—anything—to help you."

They had just ridden in from Biloxi. The marquesa was scuttling up the stair, following Pompey and their bags.

In the dim hall Kirk had caught Juanita's hand., holding her back She had smilled up at him, leaving her hand in his, knowing an instants poignant happiness

"I am happy," she had said with brave, soft eyes; had turned from him, following the marquesa to their rooms.

And there on the bed had lain the new dress—black tulle with a line of red roses down the back black slippers and a little spangled fan.

Juanita wore the dress that evening, coming down the stair to find Kirk waiting, tall in his evening clothes, his eyes troubled, yet lighting at sight of her.

The marquesa had on the red satin dress with the beaded red cape she had worn at the Comus ball. She seemed cross and rather abstracted, yet alert whenever Kirk spoke to Juanita, however casually, as they rode to the Cranshaws'.

Perhaps, if the place cards were kind, he would sit next to Juanita, reflected Kirk, and surely they would dance after dinner.

Juanita's change of heart could not last. It had come too suddenly, had taken place almost before his eyes that night at Tarpon Point. Something had been said—he could not account for it.

Moon of Delight had started it. If the men in their alcoholic mirth had accused him of having an affair with the Moon; if he himself had expressed to Juanita any mysterious attraction to the Moon, he could have understood it

But he had taken care to do just the reverse, and she had resented even that.

2,000 Years Ago And Today

By The Schaffner Queen Co.

Much noise, pomp and ceremony attended burial rites in ancient times. When a pagan of wealth and position passed away, mourners were hired for the occasion—and many of his personal possessions were interred with him.

Queer weapons, utensils, ornaments and furnishings have been unearthed. One of the most unique is the luxurious golden chariot found in the tomb of the Egyptian King Tut-Ankh-Amen.

With the coming of Christianity, thinking reached a higher plane. Funeral observances achieved more sincerity and simplicity.

The progressive funeral director, today, disparages ostentatious display. His service is quiet and dignified—the result of careful, efficient plans, performed with exactitude.

"Heart of a Wife"
BY ADELE GARRISON

THERE was something in Philip Veritzen's voice as he asked me what I thought of Avis Arlen, which aroused every bit of combativeness in me. Perhaps I imagined it, but it seemed to me there was a certain smugness about the question as if he were immensely complacent about something. All the suspicion aroused by the open pursuit of Noel by Avis Arlen and the evident approval of her conduct by her mother and Philip Veritzen rushed back upon me. Was Noel's father trying to kill the spirit of the solemn pact he had with me not to interfere with his son's betrothal with Dicky's niece, while pretending to keep the letter of the contract? I resolved to seize the opening he had given me and bring him out into the open, if possible.

"What do you mean? As a wife for Noel?" I asked coolly.

I had startled him, I realized that, with a malicious little thrill.

He stared at me with his eyebrows slightly lifted, and then he was guilty of the banal question that I have often used, but which I would never expect from Philip Veritzen.

"What do you mean?"

"Just that," I said, and I gave an emphatic little nod, trying to appear as much like what Lil calls a "feminine nit-wit" as possible

"You surely have seen how determined in pursuit of your son the young woman is."

"A Sweet, Naive Child"

Mr. Veritzen's eyebrows drew together portentously.

"Is that what you think of my little friend?" he asked. "That she is what our mid-Victorian friends would call a designing woman?"

His voice was playful, but there was that in it which told me that my criticism of his dead friend's daughter had displeased him.

"What do you call her?" I asked saucily.

"A sweet, naive child—an unconscious little flirt, it is true, but who likes Noel immensely and is frank and childlike enough to show her liking without caring about the opinion of other people."

I had hard work to repress a grin at his fatuity. Why was it, I wondered, that men of Philip Veritzen's mentality and shrewdness in judging human nature were always blind to the wiles of girls of Avis Arlen's type part moron and part shrewd woman of the world?

"I am not disputing that," I said, "but- is the young woman in ignorance of the bethrothal of Noel and Mary?"

He eyed me warily

"I do not know what Noel has told her," he said "He doesn't confide his affairs of the heart to me, but I do not see why the fact should particularly concern Miss Arlen. A betrothal is not a marriage, you know."

I lifted my eyes and looked at him steadily.

"Does that mean," I asked, "that you have repented of the solemn pact you made with me about Noel and Mary during last Christmas time?"

For a moment, there was a flaming something in Philip Veritzen's eyes as he bent them upon me

"Two to Keep a Bargain"

"It takes two to make a pact and two to keep it," he said quickly.

Then he stopped short and looked at me oddly.

"Forgive me," he said quickly, I should not have said that."

My face felt as if it had been standing over a hot stove, baking griddle cakes. I knew that my cheeks must be an ugly brick red, for I suddenly had realized the meaning of both his impetuous speech and his apology.

Stripped of all disguise, his words could mean but one thing. When he had promised me that he would sanction the betrothal of Noel and Mary, he had expected in return that I would listen to and accept his protestations of love for me. In his opinion, I had not fulfilled my part of the pact, and he felt under no obligation to keep his.

But he had apologized! Did that mean he was big enough to forget that he had expected a reward from me which I could not give him, and would keep his part of the bargain? Or was it simply an empty, courteous gesture and had he reserved the right to do everything in his power to separate Noel from Mary short of openly flouting their betrothal?

Again I moved into the open.

"Will you forgive me if I ask you why you are trying to substitute Avis Arlen for Mary in Noel's life?"

In all his life, I think he never was nearer a violent explosion of anger, something abherrent to his poised mentality, his controlled emotions. His body stiffened, his hands tightened upon the arms of his chair, and his eyes—I had the sensation of looking at white-hot metal. But when at last he answered me, his voice was cold and controlled.

"You certainly have courage, m'lady," he said. "I do not think anyone else in the world would have dared to ask me such a question. I would not forgive it in anyone else, but—but you are privileged."

"It concerns me, too, nearly — Mary is very dear to me—or I should never have ventured to put it—or to repeat it."

I emphasized the last words and looked at him with apparently calm expectation of an answer, although it took a distinct effort to keep my voice from shaking. No one knew better than I the risk I ran in thus offending the great financier by calling him to account for his conduct.

Jubilee's Pardner
A Story of Boyhood Adventure
BY JUDD M. LEWIS

TODAY was barbecu day. And it was the first thing I thought about when I woke up, and I told Jubilee about it when I let him down by the rope in his teeth, and when I had milked the dummed brutes and come in to feed my face it was all that was talked of at breakfast, and me and the bunch talked about it all the way to the pasture. Frenchy said his father was good at it. He said his father could barbecu a cow. I thought he was trying to spoof me. I told him he couldn't get a cow in the barbecu thing he made in our yard, but he said some are made big enough to hold cows. I wouldn't mind if he would barbecu our cows if he could do it without hurting them.

Peanuts was hanging around beside the pasture gate waiting to see if I was still mad at him, and when he found out that I was he streaked it acrosst the pasture with me after him, and he went through the woods like a windstorm, and I let him go. I'll get him yet. After we had had a swim we all went to my house and Frenchy's father had been there and made a fire in the barbecu thing and went away, so we all stuck around and watched it, and then he came back and he had a bushel full of white bundles, and they were chickens, all wrapped up, and when the fire got down to coals he put the chickens in on the grate, and there were eight half chickens, and when they began to get hot Frenchy's father kept brushing them with something made out of butter and other things, and when it got near supper time my mother got the table ready in the house, and when Frenchy's father said the chickens was done my father brought out a big platter and took them in. Then Frenchy and his father came in and we each had half a chicken. Were they good? Boy! After we had et my ant played the piano, then Frenchy's father said he would go home and get his fiddle, and my ant got up and said she would go with him, but my mother said, "Why not send your little boy and Thomas Aristides?" So he said all right, and my ant looked at my mother like she was trying to pick out a good place to bite her. When we got the fiddle and got back Frenchy's father certainly did tear off some music. He even had my grandfather showing them the kind of a dance a lady he used to know named Salomey done. Everyone thought that was funny. Then Frenchy's father danced and played at the same time, and he could dance. Then I got down in the corner and put my hand on the floor and held my hands behind my back and pushed myself around the room as fast as I could go. I would of been all right only my hand hit my grandfather's corn and I got sent to bed. So I don't know what happened after that. My father said he is going to make me of shoving off. When ... Lee done anything it is ... I do like it ...

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor, The Star

The first Marion league champion of 1930 to win the title the second consecutive season. That's the Kappas, known better among the downtown bleacherites as the Kappa Flappa Dappas, but still the Kappas. Yesterday these champions of 1930 went right out and won themselves another pennant and gained for themselves the right to compete in the Little World Series by overcoming a three-run lead of the Erie Traffic club and going on to beat the railroaders by a 7-5 count.

Only two games were played yesterday and both of them involved the four teams who are listed in the first division of the standings. The Serv-U-Wel Grocers and Prospect Firemen played the other setto and when it was all over there were two teams tied for second in the Commercial circuit. The Grocers and Firemen they are that are tied for the runner-up post and that is where they will be when the season gets under way again next spring. Both have completed their schedule of 14 games and will now hang up the "spikes" until another season rolls around.

Erie Is Fourth

The Erie Traffic club, by virtue of its defeat yesterday, ends the season in fourth place.

One other game scheduled for yesterday was postponed. It was the K. of P. Wesley Junior contest. The Company B. soldiers were booked to play the General Excavator but forfeited to the latter as the soldiers are doing their bit toward the national defense by "working out" at Camp Perry.

It looked for awhile yesterday as though the 1930 Commercial champions might not come through with a victory. The Erie nine unlimbered their heavy bats in the first inning and proceeded, with the help of a pair of Kappa errors, to chase three scores across the plate before the side had been retired in the first frame. Three runs isn't much of a lead in this game but it looked big when the Kappas could get but one man farther than third in the first three innings.

Rank Gets Better

The railroaders commenced to weaken in the fourth frame though and the Kappas rapidly whittled away the lead and took command of the situation in the fifth stanza. While the Kappa batters were getting to Shoemaker for the necessary tallies, Roscoe Rank was pitching effectively to hold the railroaders' bats well in check. With a 7-3 lead at the start of the seventh, Rank allowed the losers to touch him for one hit which netted a pair of runs but that wasn't enough to cause any axiety in the camp of the Kappas. The Railroaders were stopped cold after these two runs were scored.

Johnny Marshall went and broke up another ball game. Just when everything was going along fine for the Prospect Firemen and they were seeing visions of undisputed possession of second place in the final standings, the shortstop who makes a specialty of banging homers when they count the most, stepped into an outside ball and clouted it out for a home run.

Two Already On

The home run itself wouldn't have done so much damage but there were already two men on base. Three runs came in and right there Prospect lost a 2-0 lead and also the ball game. Starling Somerlot held the Firemen in complete submission the rest of the game while his teammates added one run to the Serv-U-Wel total just to make the victory a little surer.

So get out your megaphones and get ready folks to yell for the Little World's Series entrants. Three of them are already in, the Irish, C., D. & M and the Kappas. The fourth will be decided not later than next Wednesday.

Batteries and score by innings:

Prospect Firemen	011 000 0 - 2
Serv-U-Wel	003 010 x - 4

Prospect, Lauer and Johnson; Serv-U-Wel, Somerlot and Walters.

Kappas	010 230 1 — 7
Erie Traffic club	300 000 2 — 5

Kappas, Rank and Hinklin; Erie Traffic club, Shoemaker and Statler.

CALUMET BUTLER IS 3-YEAR-OLD CHAMP

Outsider Cops Hambletonian Stake and Harness Trotting Title.

By The Associated Press

GOSHEN, N. Y., Aug. 15 — The new American three-year-old trotting champion is Calumet Butler, owned by William M. Wright of Lexington, Ky.

An outsider in the betting, Calumet Butler, driven by 62-year-old Dick McMahon, raced to victory in the $50,000 Hambletonian stake here yesterday. The victory carried with it the three-year-old trotting title and a cash prize of $31,549.97.

The son of Truax out of Justissima, placed third in the opening heat of one mile, won by John M. Berry's Keno of Rome, Ga., and then went out to capture the second in fairly easy fashion and the third and deciding heat from Keno by the narrowest of margins. The times were 2:04 1-4; 2:03 1-4; 2:05 1-4.

Second money of $9,014.28 went to Keno; third of $4,567.14 to Calumet Belricka and fourth of $1,000 to Charlotte Hanover.

Nedda Guy, the well-backed favorite owned by William H. Cane, never was a factor.

Play for Title.

EVEN the youngsters are taking their recreation ball seriously enough now to cause them to name all-city teams. Here is the latest, received by a youth who is an ardent follower of the city leagues. He admits this might not be the best possible team but it is the one he thinks is best. Well, that's something. He's the first one who has admitted his team wasn't the best possible lineup. Strike a medal for the boy.

Here's the lineup:

Bob Merchant 1b., (Trinity Baptist and C., D. & M.); Neimeyer rf., (Calvary and Gasco club); Marshall ss., (Lee Street and Serv-U-Wel); Robbins cf., (Calvary and Roundhouse); Gallant 3b., (Presbyterians); Staley 2b., Trinity Baptist and C., D. & M.); Somerlot lf., (Trinity Baptist and Serv-U-Wel); Johnson c., (Prospect); Gunder p., (St. Mary's and Kappas); Schwaderer p., (First Reformed).

The metallic ring of flying maples will be heard again starting today in the local bowling alleys as the alleys are thrown open to the public after two months period of inactivity. The alleys will be open from now until sometime next May.

Interest in bowling has been rapidly increasing here during the last few seasons and it is expected that it will come to be on the upgrade during the present season.

While the games probably will not draw the patronage now that it will a little later in the season, as soon as warm weather gives way to cold the indoor sports fans will trek to the alleys in record number. It's a good sport and every year it is making new inroads on the various other winter indoor pastimes.

This is getting serious! Just as I am about to "shoot the works" on something else, here comes another all-city lineup. Sometimes I think it might be better to just name all the players on some honorary lineup. It wouldn't be right but it's the only way you'll ever please everybody.

First Team: Johnson, c, (Prospect); Gunder, p, (St. Mary and Kappas); Marshall, ss, (Serv-U-Wel and Lee Street); Cram, 1b, (Bishops and Huber); Braham, 2b, (Lee Street and Huber); Gallant, 3b, (Presbyterian); M. Gibson, lf, (Huber and Calvary); Robbins, cf, (Calvary and Erie Roundhouse); Neimeyer, rf, (Calvary and Gasco club); B. Gibson, utility, (Calvary and Fairfield).

Second Team: H. Conkle, c, C., D. & M. and Lee Street); Gamble, p, (Epworth No. 1 and C., D. & M.); Baldauf, ss, (Calvary and Silk Mill); R. Merchant, 1b, (Trinity Baptist and C., D. & M.); W. Fetter, 2b, (C., D. & M. and Christian Seniors); Staley, 2b, (Trinity Baptist and C., D. & M.); S. Somerlot, lf, (Trinity Baptist and Serv-U-Wel); H. Richards, cf, (Lee Street and Erie Traffic club); Sloat, rf, (Huber and St. Paul Lutheran); Crabtree, utility, (Lee Street and Huber).

Hawaiian Player Looks Good

By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO—Easy going, husky Henry Oana, one of the few Hawaiians, if not the only one, in organized baseball, has reached the stage where the owners of the San Francisco Seals list him as an "important money" prospect.

He came to the Pacific Coast league club from Honolulu three years ago described as a "Handy Andy." Every position on the team was familiar to him.

The Seals farmed out the 18-year-old recruit to the Arizona State league for two seasons. He took a whirl at pitching, the infield and the outfield.

He found himself as an outfielder, being blessed with a powerful throwing arm, great speed and an ability to whack the ball to the far reaches of the parks.

Just arrived at the voting age and a regular in the Seals' lineup, Oana has attracted attention of big league scouts this season. He may or may not be sold this year, but if, and when he is, his owners expect to profit to the extent of five figures.

The big righthander is built along the lines of a heavyweight fighter and takes a mighty swipe at the ball.

His only noticeable weakness is an inability to connect with shoulder-high balls.

A'S GAIN AS SOLONS DROP THIRD IN ROW TO CHICAGO SOX, 5-4

Cardinals Rally Late To Pound Out Win Over Brooklyn, 9-3.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

The two weeks of baseball campaigning which began a few days ago with the start of the most recent intersectional series in the major leagues appears to be about enough to settle the pennant races for this season.

The A's, although idle yesterday, had the edge in their first western series with Detroit while their nearest rivals, the Washington Senators, dropped their third straight game to the Chicago White Sox and the third place New York Yankees lost two to Cleveland, leaving them 11½ and 15½ games behind respectively. The Cards failed to register an increase yesterday when they took their fourth game in succession from Brooklyn, but while they were registering that sweep, Chicago dropped to third by breaking even with the Phillies and New York barely edged out Pittsburgh in a five game series, finishing 9½ games back of St. Louis.

Vic Frasier's fine relief pitching in the ninth held off a Washington rally and gave the White Sox a 5 to 4 victory they earned by pounding Sam Jones for three runs in the seventh. Lou Gehrig hit his thirty-second homer and Babe Ruth his thirty-first in the Yankee-Cleveland double bill, but the highlanders lost both games. The final count in the opening slugfest was 13 to 7, while Cleveland went right on hitting to win the second game 9-1 behnd Willis Hudlin's six hit pitching.

The second division leaders of the league the St. Louis Browns, won the other American game yesterday, pounding the Boston Red Sox for a 12 to 2 victory.

Dolf Luque's pitching kept the Cardinals trailing up to the eighth inning, but they broke loose then and scored eight runs in two frames to beat Brooklyn 9 to 3. New York's Giants kept pace when they started their newest pitcher, Jim Mooney, and beat out Glenn Spencer and the Pittsburgh Pirates 2 to 1.

The Phillies made it two in a row over Chicago, dropping the Cubs from their virtual tie for second place as they pounded out a 14 to 4 decision. Boston's Braves broke another virtual tie, regaining undisputed possession of fifth place by taking both games of a double header from Cincinnati. Ed Brandt outpitched Larry Benton to win the first 1 to 0, while Willie Sherdel did as well, winning the second 3 to 1, on a five hit performance.

Yates Meets Somerville.

By The Associated Press

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 15—An International final pitted Arthur (Ducky) Yates of Rochester, N. Y., against C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville of London, Ont., in the 36-hole title round of the Canadian amateur golf championship today. In the semi-final round yesterday Yates eliminated Jack Cameron of Montreal, 7 and 5, while Somerville, the defending champion, put out Bob Morrison of Victoria, 7 and 6.

LINCOLN PARK PUT IN TIP-TOP SHAPE FOR OPENING GAMES

Six Contests Slated for First Day; Tough Competition Looms Probable.

Everything is in readiness for the opening Sunday at noon of the first annual Central Ohio recreation baseball tournament at Lincoln park. Twenty teams are entered for play and of this number 12 will swing into action on the first day of competition.

Lincoln park will present a different appearance Sunday than it has shown at any time this summer. The entire playing field will have been scraped and reconditioned. White foul lines will have been painted extending from home plate the entire distance to the right and left field fences. The grandstand will have been cleaned and put in better condition than it has been all summer.

Two Officials

Two officials will be used in each of the games. Norris Crissinger of Marion, president of the city recreation ball association, and Ed. Johnson of Prospect, will divide the duties of officiating. The first game is scheduled to commence promptly at 12 noon with five more following at successive hours. The entire schedule of games appears elsewhere on this page.

Local fans will welcome the opportunity to witness in action such teams as the Linden Gophers, of Columbus, Equity Union Creamery of Lima, Firestone Tires of Lima, Elks Lodge of Delaware, Huber Rollers of Marion, Jenner Lunches of Marion, Merchant Boosters of Nevada, and like teams. The lineups of all of these teams will be fairly blazing with stars of local and neighboring city sandlots.

The Linden Gophers of Columbus are bringing an undefeated team here for the tournament and will meet in the first game, the Merchant Boosters of Nevada, that has been defeated but once this season. Minor Keller, first string hurler of Nevada has been hurling some fancy ball for Nevada this season and expects to be in good form when he dishes up his slants to the hard hitting Gophers. Keller will be opposed by List for the Gophers. The latter is a tough pitcher, enough that he has hurled the Gophers to the top in the Franklin Independent league of Columbus, one of the best of the Capital city circuits.

Bacon To Play

Francis Bacon, one time Steam Shovel and Eagle softball star of Marion is returning to local competition Sunday to play shortstop for the Jenner Lunches when that team crosses bats with the Firestone Tires of Lima. Bacon will give the Lima boys some ideas on long distance clouting if he is up to his usual form. However he will not likely find it easy to send the lightning fast balls of Don Lamphar into the outer regions of the park. Lamphar is one of Lima's leading mound artists.

Everything has been done to make the tournament a huge success. Now its up to the ball clubs to produce some competition worthy of the name. There isn't much doubt but what the ball teams will do their part. With a $50 cash prize awaiting the winner and half that for the runner-up there is good incentive to work.

Blues Take Opener and Columbus Rallies To Cop Nightcap.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 15—After the first few weeks of the American Association season Indianapolis fans wouldn't have given a dime for the Indian's chances of finishing in the first division—but today they are perched in second place.

They made a couple of stretch runs yesterday to do Minneapolis out of a pair of decisions, 6 to 3, and 7 to 5. In both games they had to punch over the winning runs late in the game, and they were able to do it.

St. Paul's potential champions were outhit by Louisville, 8 to 5, but won 3 to 2, with the aid of six Colonel errors.

Del Wetherell, who went to Toledo from Columbus, let Milwaukee down with five hits, while the Mud Hens were mauling the Brewers, 13 to 3.

Columbus and Kansas City whacked up a doubleheader, with the Blues winning the opener, 9 to 5, and the Red Birds took the second, 10 to 6.

PEACHES SELLING AROUND $1.49 HERE

Tennessee Fruit Arrives To Replace Georgia Product on Market.

The week found markets free of any unusual features. Peaches for canning which last week threatened to become a burden on the markets, became less plentiful early this week as the Georgia fruit gradually disappeared and Tennessee peaches came on to take their place. Peaches from the latter state were supplying practically the entire demand by the end of the week. Home grown peaches have not yet appeared on the market in any great quantities, contrary to the expectations of dealers. With the arrival of the Tennessee peaches the retail price was boosted four cents on the bushel. Good quality fruit sold at $1.49.

Apples becoming more plentiful as the week advanced, were being offered at 59 cents for a bushel basket yesterday. The fruit was of good quality and dealers report fairly heavy sales. California fruit was fairly plentiful all week and supplied a large part of the demand. Bartlett pears sold for four pounds for 25 cents. Malaga grapes at two pounds for 25 cents and oranges as low as 25 cents a dozen. Georgia watermelons continue to supply the bulk of the demand and a price of 35 cents was quoted all week.

The week found sweet corn plentiful almost to the point of becoming a drug on the market. In an effort to move their stock, several dealers were offering corn as low as two dozen ears for 25 cents. Green beans were slightly more plentiful the latter part of the week while peas were scarce all week. Beets and carrots were plentiful all week and sold at five cents a bunch. Other vegetables were fairly plentiful with prices showing little change.

The franc gets its name from the original inscription, "Francorum Rex"; King of the French.

LARGE STOCKS DEPRESS WHEAT

Price Tends Downward on Chicago Market; Corn Also Sags.

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, Aug. 15—With visible stocks of domestic wheat the largest ever known, grains tended downward early today. September corn continued under selling pressure. Opening 1-4 cents off to 1-8@1-4 up, wheat afterward showed a disposition to sag Corn started at 3-4 cent decline to 1-4 advance, and later rallied.

Wheat traders here ignored relative strength shown by the Liverpool market, the firmness of British quotations being ascribed to smaller world shipments this week. Abundance of domestic wheat on farms suggested heavier use of wheat as feed for livestock, which was construed bearishly regarding corn. Despite speculative buying on declines, September corn again outdid the season's cotton price record, duplicating yesterday's performance by tumbling to below 46 cents.

On the downward swings of the market for September corn, the spread between September and December narrowed to around 6 1-4 cents, against 7 1-2 cents difference at the close yesterday and 10 1-2 on Monday. Weakness of September was in the face of the fact that arrivals of corn in Chicago were small, only 65 cars compared with 236 a year ago. It was explained that present prices obtainable at country stations furnished little incentive for any great volume of marketing. Oats were easy, influenced by other cereals Provisions advanced on account of scarcity of offerings.

Rise in Late Trading

In later trading, all grains advanced as a result of Russian reports that abolition of the entire rationing system for Soviet consumers was probable, with the immediate effect of restricting Russian grain exports. The conclusion was drawn that this meant the opening of increased European outlets for grain from this side of the Atlantic.

Turning New Pages

WITH EDNA B. DUTTON

IF you are one of those readers to whom half the enjoyment of reading a story is "settling the problem in your own way" do not fail to read "Pam's Own Story," by the Baroness von Hutten. It is a fascinating, maddening story of a woman running into love, running away from it, back, and away again. One wishes that she would make up her mind and be satisfied as her mother was, but when she doesn't, one takes up the pursuit again, boarding the same trains and boats and sympathizing with her to the last stand.

The author has dedicated the book to Pam's old friends who may have "survived" the 25 years that have passed since I first wrote about her." Also she declares, "I shall write no more about her."

THE story of Pam's parents is already known by her old friends and her new ones will find no small amount of delight in learning their history. That Pam, the ugly duckling, is unusual, the reader is not long in discovering so what she does is not in a daring spirit but rather because she believes it should be done

One misses a couple of breaths at some of Pam's experiences and adventures and is provoked when she refuses to leave her dingy quarters with the Duchess of Wight, after the death of her grandfather, who left her penniless. Her life centers around one James Peele, who loves her and who on numerous occasions comes near being her husband, and Jack de Lensky, who really does become her husband

The family ties are broken with the mischief of Jack's cousin, Bronka, an erratic sort of a person, lures him away from the domestic fireside, and Pam decides to find happiness with James Peele. The story comes to an unexpected climax and whether you like it or not, honesty compels you to agree that it is a story that will furnish food for discussion for an evening or two

New Angle in Love Story

SORDID as the plot may seem the author has made a human and quite readable story out of "Binny's Women," a tale of New Orleans Although two women figure in the story it is not the "eternal triangle" for one of the women is Binny's wife and the other his daughter

Binny, who is a contractor by way of making a livelihood and his daughter Joel get along beautifully until Binny marries Georgia for his second wife, when Joel is 17 Joel's mother died when she was but eight years of age, at a time when the family was still respectably poor. The years brought a fair amount of wealth to Binny and it was to further his own and Joel's social positions that he married Georgia Georgia was of the quality but utterly without financial background

The reader's sympathy is divided between Georgia in the bitter battle waged silently between herself and Joel, and Binny whose blind affection for the two women refuses to let him see the real relations existing between the two Georgia lives up to her end of the bargain but naturally falls in love with another man Binny's death offers another tangle which the author, Gladys Knight, brings to a satisfactory end

AYRES ANALYZES INDUSTRIAL TREND

Sees Evidence That Improvement Awaits Adjustments of Costs.

By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 15. (AP) — Industrial production increased steadily and rapidly during the winter and spring months of this year, reports Col. Leonard P. Ayres, of the Cleveland Trust company, in his monthly review of business conditions.

Using the industrial activity index of his bank, which is based on that of the Federal Reserve board, Colonel Ayres found the industrial output to be 26.3 per cent below the computed normal level at its lowest point yet reached, which was in January. The index then advanced until it was only 21.8 per cent below normal in April Since then, he said, it has turned down, and has cancelled most of the spring advance.

It fell to 22.9 in May, and to 25.6 in June. The July figures probably will be little changed from June, he explained, "and it now appears probable that those for August will be nearly as low as those at the beginning of the year"

This cancelling during the summer months of the increases in industrial activity attained during the spring months, he said, is probably the most significant domestic development of the year so far. "It appears to indicate that sustained improvement in general business activity in this country is awaiting still further and more extensive readjustments between wages, prices, rents, production costs, distribution costs, and overhead charges Many corporation managements already have been able to deal with these problems with such energy and adaptability that they are operating at a profit under the new and difficult present conditions In proportion as their numbers increase, general business recovery will be progressively attained"

A second significant development of the summer months, he pointed out, is the mass of evidence piling up here and abroad showing that politics and economics are inextricably combined and intertwined in the business difficulties afflicting the world.

Postmaster Suggests Route for Sunday Trip

A tour through one of the most scenic sections of this part of the state was suggested for a Sunday automobile trip by Postmaster French Crow. The routings for the trip were made out by the Marion Auto club.

The trip calls for 174 miles of travel without a single detour to spoil the day, the auto club announced. Leaving Marion, motorists may take route 30 through Galion to Mansfield. From Mansfield south the motorist will find some unusually beautiful scenery by following route 39 to Loudenville and Millersburg.

Coshocton is the next city to be reached on the trip and is 24 miles from Millersburg on route 76. More beautiful scenery will be found between Coshocton and Mt. Gilead with route 95 being taken through Mt. Vernon. The same route also will return the motorist to Marion from Mt. Gilead.

Numerous historical spots will be found by the tourist along the route. In the city park at Mansfield stands a blockhouse built in 1813. It was used as the first courthouse of Richland county. A monument to Johnny Appleseed (John Chapman) also can be found in Mansfield.

In Coshocton county will be found an old stone fort four miles east of West Lafayette. White Woman's rocks are four miles northwest of Coshocton and ancient flint quarries will be found three miles from Warsaw. The Bouquet monument marks the spot where Colonel Henry Bouquet with 1,500 men camped in 1764 at a point one mile from the forks of the Muskingum river and ordered Indian chiefs to give up their prisoners.

In Knox county of which Mt Vernon is the county seat will be found Kenyon college and Kenyon college forest at Gambier, Brinkhaven state preserve near Brinkhaven and a monument to Daniel Decatur Emmett, composer of "Dixie Land." His birthplace and tomb is at Mt. Vernon.
